Last Weekend At Mt. Trashmore

Winter Lecture Series Held At Museum

The Virginia Marine Science Museum has announced its annual winter lecture series, "Environmental Concerns for the 1990s."

"Global Ocean Pollution" focuses on pollution from a global perspective on Wednesday, Jan. 17 at 7:30 p.m. Kathryn J. O'Hara, director of the Pollution Prevention Program of the Center for Marine Conservation, will lead the lecture.

"Conservation of Threatened and Endangered Species" features a talk by Catherine Bourne, a wildlife inspector with U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service on Wednesday, Jan. 24 at 7:30 p.m. Endangered species from the African elephant to Virginia's sea turtles will be discussed.

"Virginia's Role in Environmental Survival" led by Christopher A. Paguc, zoologist with the Virginia Natural Heritage

Program, will discuss the state's responsibility to protect the environment. The lecture will be held on Wednesday, Jan. 31 at 7:30 p.m.

Each lecture is $4 for members and $5 for non members. Special interest groups can call for group rates. A reception will follow each lecture.

For more information call 425-3476.

Tax Forms Are Available At Beach Libraries

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) provides libraries with a supply of the most commonly requested federal tax forms, and these forms will be available in each Virginia Beach public library on a first come-first served basis beginning January 2.

Taxpayers who go to the Virginia Beach public libraries will also be able to make copies of most Federal tax forms. Some forms can be obtained only from the IRS itself. Photocopies in the libraries cost ten cents per page.

Virginia tax forms follow the same pattern; those supplied free by the state can be picked up while they last, but there will always be originals available to photocopy.

Some out-of-state tax forms are available for photocopying only at the central library.

The libraries have books and video and audio tapes on how to prepare tax returns, but library staff are not permitted to give advice about how to prepare taxes.

Rec. Center Presents Dance Expose Workshops

The Kempsville Recreation Center will offer Dance Expose, a series of workshops and performances, throughout the Jan. 6-7 weekend by leading dance schools and companies in the area.

Programming is geared toward all ages and will cover a diverse range of dance styles including jazz, tap, children's dance, aerobic dance and African and Spanish dance.

Scheduled events include workshops on Saturday, Jan. 6 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and a free performance by the dance companies in attendance on Sunday, Jan. 7 at 3:30 p.m.

All programs and the dance showcase are open to the general public, with no facility cards or guest passes required.

For more information, contact The Virginia Beach Recreation Center, Kempsville at 495-1892.

City Responded To 400 To 500 Requests For Help With Burst Pipes Over Three-Day Christmas Weekend

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

"Obviously last weekend was one of the worst," said Talmadge Piland, assistant to the director of the Virginia Beach public utilities department.

Over the three-day Christmas weekend, public utilities responded to 400 to 500 special requests to help residents because of frozen or broken pipes. A few years ago, the department responded to 1,000 calls in three days.

"We don't usually respond to that many," Piland said.

Piland said in most cases, residents turn on the tap and discover they have no water. This usually means the service line is frozen. The freezing doesn't occur overnight, though, unless a pipe is exposed. It normally takes a prolonged period of freezing temperatures for pipes to freeze.

"The weather we've been experiencing these past few days can certainly take its toll on pipes," he said.

Piland added that poor insulation, crawl space under a home and a washing machine or sink in a garage can make a home more susceptible to freezing. There are several precautions that can be taken to winterize a home to prevent freezing or bursting:

Wrap pipes to protect them from excessive cold that might cause them to freeze. Don't just insulate outside pipes, but protect the pipes on outside walls as well.

Even when the pipes are wrapped, leave the kitchen and bathroom cabinet doors open so that heat can reach pipes under the sinks.

During periods of extremely cold weather, it is also a good idea to keep faucets dripping slightly.

While water is important to use a little water now than to have a house flooded from burst pipes later, according to a public utilities department press release.

"A lot of times homeowners will go out of town or leave a home vacant with the heat off. In these cases, there's no protection for the pipes," Piland said. A heat setting over 60 degrees will keep a house warm enough to help prevent damage.

When pipes do freeze, no water will flow through the faucets. If the frozen spot can be isolated, use a high wattage lamp or hair dryer on the pipe to thaw. Piland warns never to use a blow torch; the pressure will build and the pipes will explode.

It is important to know where the water shut-off valve is located in case a pipe does burst, Piland said. If a pipe bursts between the city water meter and the shut-off valve, public utilities should be called immediately.

The weather forecast is predicting warmer weather, Piland said, which

Mayor Proclaims Jubilee Day

In cooperation with the Virginia Beach Office of the National Association of the Advancement of Colored People, Mayor Meyera E. Oberndorf has proclaimed January 1, 1990 as Jubilee Day in Virginia Beach.

Jubilee Day recognizes the Black Americans' celebration of freedom from slavery and emphasizes the importance of the basic human right to determine one's own destiny. Vice Mayor Robert E. Fentress recently presented the following Jubilee Day proclamation to E. George Minns, president of the Virginia Beach NAACP; Helen Shropshire, Jubilee Day coordinator; and Edward D. Holley, NAACP executive committee member.

Whereas: The Virginia Beach Office of the National Association of the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) has designated January 1, 1990, as the observance of JUBILEE DAY by the Black community;

Whereas: This observance recognizes the Black American's celebration of freedom from slavery and emphasizes the importance of the basic human right to determine one's own destiny;

Whereas: The observance of JUBILEE DAY can strengthen the insight of all of our citizens regarding the issues of human rights, the great strides that have been made to eliminate the barriers of inequality for minority groups and the continuing struggle against racial discrimination;

Whereas: The City of Virginia Beach is composed of a variety of ethnic groups whose talents, culture, and history provide a significant contribution to this community; and,

Whereas: The City of Virginia Beach is proud of the outstanding accomplishments of the Black community and recognizes the importance of sharing in a celebration of cultural heritage and vitality.

Now, Therefore, I, Meyera E. Oberndorf, Mayor of the City of Virginia Beach, welcome the opportunity to join the NAACP and members of the local Black community in their observance of emancipation and freedom, and do hereby Proclaim:

JUBILEE DAY JANUARY 1, 1990,

in Virginia Beach and urge all citizens to take proper note of this observance and its significance to the Black residents in our community.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the City of Virginia Beach, Virginia, to be affixed this Twenty-ninth day of December, Nineteen Hundred and Eighty-nine.

Visitor Information Center Expected To Be Completed By May 1990

The new $1.7 million Virginia Beach Visitor Information Center currently under construction, located in the median strip of Route 44 between the Pavilion Convention Center and the new Virginia Beach Center for the Arts, is coming right along.

The new center is being built to accommodate the growing number of visitors to Virginia Beach. Since 1973, the overnight tourist population has grown from 1.4 million to an estimated 2.5 million visitors annually. It is estimated that during 1988, Virginia Beach tourists and conventioners spent more than $500 million in the city.

The current Visitor Information Center, located at Pacific Avenue and 19th Street, handled 100 walk-in visitors per hour during the summer of 1988 and a total of 150,000 visitors throughout the year. Because of its strategic location at the end of the Virginia Beach Expressway, the new center is expected to attract many more visitors as they first enter the resort area.

The new center will be 6,500 square-feet, almost doubling the size of the current facility. There will be 70 spaces in the parking lot which will circle the building. The current center was donated to the City of Virginia Beach by the Commonwealth of Virginia. The building is expected to be completed in May 1990.

The City's Volunteer Rescue Squads Need You!

The Mayor's Report

Virginia Beach Mayor
The Honorable
Meyera Oberndorf

As a citizen of Virginia Beach, you are fortunate to have an Emergency Medical Services System comprised of over 600 caring volunteers.

Who are these people? You may recognize them as a neighbor, an employee or a business associate. They are people like you and me. They are individuals who care about their community and the welfare of its residents and visitors. You may see them at the scene of an accident or at the house next door preparing to transport a sick neighbor.

You may see them in different uniforms driving in a variety of ambulances. The one thing they all have in common is that they are volunteers. They give thousands of hours a year to provide emergency medical services 24 hours a day, 365 days per year.

These civic-minded citizens operate from 11 volunteer rescue squads throughout the city. Their mission is not only provide ambulance services, but advanced and specialty services as well. There are volunteers who provide advanced emergency care (cardiac technicians and paramedics); there are volunteers who free us from wrecked automobiles; and there are volunteers who rescue us from water related emergencies.

These advanced life support, squad truck, dive and surf boat rescue teams form the only all volunteer rescue service among the nation's 100 most populous cities. Many citizens are not aware of this most unique emergency medical care service.

These dedicated volunteers depend a great deal on your tax deductible donations for use in the purchase of ambulances and specialized equipment. More importantly, however, they rely on citizens to become members of their organizations. With a growing community there is an increasing demand for emergency medical technicians and paramedics. This need is especially noticed during the day when most people work.

If you are interested in becoming a provider of emergency medical services and are at least 18 years of age, I urge you to contact the central administrative office of Emergency Medical Services at 428-6002. This city agency can provide you with all of the details on becoming a rescue volunteer. They

Righting What's Wrong And Saving What's Right In Education

By Lillian Youell,
Virginia Beach Constitution
Celebration Commission
Consultant

"History will view the 1980s not as the decade of education reform, but as the decade of education debate. However, our immobility is now coming to an end, and we stand on the verge of a wave of reform that could transform the landscape of education," so said Mary H. Futrell, after serving six years as president of the National Education Association.

Educators, administrators and parents alike are grappling with the issue of school reform, wondering what should be eliminated and what innovations should be implemented. The Final Issues Forum at the Law-Related Education (LRE) Seminar I attended in St. Louis focussed on school reform.

The moderator was Steve Jenkins, director, Resource Center for LRE, Bar Association of Metropolitan St. Louis. A panel of 10 experts in the field - teachers, administrators, school board members - reacted to a hypothetical situation, copies of which were provided to the audience. This highly innovative program presented pros and cons on many of the educational reforms that have been proposed.

The scenario assumed that a state legislature had passed a comprehensive Excellence in Education Act in response to highly publicized studies criticizing the quality of education in the nation's schools. The hypothetical act provides additional funding for local public school districts, including some funding for incentive programs affording ways to meet the state's newly initiated core competencies and keys skills for all public schools in the state.

To insure achievement of these competencies, each student will be expected to pass a test at each grade level. The competencies will be developed by the State Department of Education, although local school districts may develop their own tests subject to approval from the department.

This hypothetical act also provides for other reforms, such as an increase in required units at the high school level, including successful passage of a state and U.S. Constitution exam and at least a year of computer science. All public high school students will be required to pass a state developed standardized comprehensive high school exam in order to receive a high school diploma.

In addition, all public school teachers will be required to pass a standardized teacher's exam in their respective areas of expertise. There will be an

D.C. Artist At Art Center

Washington, D.C. artist Ray Leith will present a workshop titled Drawing: The Gestural Figure on Friday, Jan. 26 from 9 a.m. to 10:30 p.m. at the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts.

Leith is one of 14 professional artists who present visual and performing arts workshops throughout the state sponsored by the affiliate program of the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts.

Following simple exercises in charcoal, students draw from the human figure using a variety of short and long poses. Leith will discuss how each student's gestural marks reflect his or her individual personality traits.

Students then focus on one detail of the day's sketches and develop a series of abstract gestural drawings that reflect their unique personalities. Participants high school age and older require no experience.

Since 1988 Leith has been teaching drawing classes at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C. She has taught painting and drawing at the Rockland Center for the Arts in Nyack, New York.

Her works have been exhibited in solo shows at the Hudson River Museum in Yonkers, New York; Anton Gallery in Washington, D.C.; and Farleigh Dickerson University in Hackensack, New Jersey. She received a BA degree in ceramics from Kirkland/Hamilton College in Clinton, New York; and an MFA in painting from Rochester Institute of Technology, College of Fine Arts.

Advance registration with a $5 nonrefundable fee is required by Jan. 19. Telephone the Center for the Arts at 425-0000 for further information.

Lynnhaven DAR Holds Meeting

The Lynnhaven Parish Chapter, National Society Daughters of the American Revolution will meet on Saturday, Jan. 13 at 10 a.m. in the home of Mrs. Harvey Williams, 637 East Lynn Shores Circle.

Hostesses for the meeting will be Mrs. Robert McCrary and Mrs. William Stiffler.

Special guest speaker will be Ms. Lannan Hughes of Green Run High School. Hughes was selected by the Virginia State DAR as Virginia's Outstanding American History Teacher for 1989. Her innovative teaching methods, her ability to stimulate a love and appreciation of history in her students and the creation of a class room setting where history comes to "life" were criteria for her selection. She will address, "How History Affects The Future."

Mrs. William Vose, chapter DAR Good Citizen chairman, will introduce the chapter's 1990 DAR Good Citizen Award recipients: Christine Everett of Green Run High School; Jason George of Kempville High School; and Pam Harrell from Tabernacle Baptist School. These are high school seniors who have exhibited qualities of leadership, dependability, service and patriotism.

Reservations may be made for this meeting by calling 481-6929 or 340-2536.

Holiday Recycle Saturday Set

The Virginia Beach Clean Community Commission, Tidewater Fibre, Reynolds Aluminum, Atlantic Paper Stock, Chambers Development/Bay Disposal and Pembroke Mall will sponsor a holiday Recycle Saturday on Jan. 6 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Pembroke Mall.

Metals, glass, paper and plastics such as milk and water jugs, dish and laundry detergent bottles, and one-, two- and three-liter soft drink bottles, will be accepted.

A free t-shirt will be given to every 20th recycler. For more information call 427-4104.

Parents Without Partners Meet

Parents Without Partners, Chapter 216, will host a dance on Saturday, Jan. 6 from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. in the Virginia Room at the Lake Wright Motel on Northampton Boulevard.

The public is invited. Proceeds will help finance the group's family and children's programs.

Admission is $5 for members and $7 for non-members.

A membership orientation will be conducted that night at 8 p.m. Call 497-8112 or 471-6672.

Court Docents Hold Meeting

The docents of the Virginia Beach Court Docent Program will hold their annual mid-year training meeting on Tuesday, Jan. 23 at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. William (Melinda) Perkins, 1405 Cherry Lane.

Mrs. Julian (Fran) Bryant, director, will report on the recently held Seventh Annual Victim's of Crime Conference where she and Mrs. David (Betty) Dickerson presented a workshop "Understanding the Court Process by Participating in a Mock Trial."

Special guest for the meeting will be Commonwealth Attorney-elect Robert Humphreys. He will answer questions and share ideas which will enable his office and the volunteers to offer their educational experience for the students who tour the courts.

Reservations may be made by calling 481-5920. The public is invited.

Home Show Aps Accepted

Applications are now being accepted for booth space in the Tidewater Builders Association 1990 Mid-Atlantic Home Show, to be held March 22 to 25 at the Virginia Beach Pavilion.

Space is reserved by submitting a 25 percent deposit and a space application agreement, obtained by calling Laura Pahnro or Amy Williamson at 420-2434.

The show, sponsored by TBA, features more than 63,000 square feet of floor space with new ideas and products for homes. Over 12,000 visitors are expected.

Twelfth Night At House

Performances by the Williamsburg Heritage Dancers and the Green Run High School Madrigal singers will lead to the 18th century spirit.

On Saturday, Jan. 6 from 5-7 p.m.

The Francis Land House will host a Twelfth Night celebration of the end of the Christmas season.

"Francis Land" and his family will host the event, offering cake and hot cider to their guest. The event will include the traditional burning of the holiday greenery, and will conclude with a toast to the New Year around the bonfire.

This is the fourth annual celebration of Twelfth Night at the Francis Land House, 3131 Virginia Beach Boulevard. The event is free and open to the public.

The Last Weekend of 1989 At Mount Trashmore

Chimney Hill resident Linda Allerd said the birds at Mt. Trashmore can eat up to two loaves of bread in 30 minutes.

During a break in the cold wave which recently gripped Virginia Beach, many locals ventured outdoors to take in the warmth and have fun at Mt. Trashmore.

Indian Lakes resident, Charles Altizer took his children, Eric, 9, and Kayla, 6, to Mt. Trashmore to fly a remote controlled glider.

The lake at Mt. Trashmore's west side was frozen on the last Friday, of 1989.

increase in the number of days in school to 200 per year, and a career ladder program that rewards teachers for extra merit.

From my notes, I will share comments made by the panelists to the hypothetical Education Act by the Legislature. One said that while it is necessary to cooperate with legislators, the issue is not the subject being taught, but pedagogy - the way subjects are taught. It is not the number of days that should be increased, but the quality of teaching.

Other educators objected to the ladder system, saying competition for merit pay is counter productive. Team effort is more important. Community leaders are more helpful when educators work cooperatively. Another asserted that skill requirements must be broad and flexible with the possibility of achievement, and that core competency requires assistance of teachers working with administrators, sharing problems and objectives to reach a consensus.

A classroom teacher said, "We are hired to teach, but then pulled for extracurricular activities and put on various committees. There is no way a teacher can do everything that is expected and still meet minimum requirements. Merit pay causes teachers to protect their ideas for fear sharing them will cause another to take credit to gain merit pay."

A middle school principal feared we are missing the mark when we focus primarily on grades and academics. We miss "the soul of the child." He insists that we must teach critical thinking skills, but we must also focus on the child's self esteem. "Ask daily what you did to help a child," was his advice.

An elementary teacher commented that the school day is fragmented. Some children leave for gifted programs; others go for remedial help. It is difficult to give every child a sense of self-esteem. We need to give children excitement, a desire to learn. Only then can we make education a meaningful experience which the child will remember. Powerful teaching will result in powerful education.

A school board member reminded us of the competing constituencies and competing ideas. The school board is the front body that takes the flack from parents and from some newspapers when they choose to "rate" districts based on tests. There are complex problems and few opportunities to rethink what we need to teach for the 21st century. Money is only a part of the problem. It's what you do with it that counts.

True reform would require interrelated disciplines. Real restructuring would provide teachers with more free time to develop new approaches and to attend seminars such as the LRE one. Educational reform basically takes place in the classroom, not in the halls of the legislature!

"Educators, you've blown it!" exclaimed a university professor. "When the legislators say they want to see test scores, you tend to curve the scores, decreasing the rate of increasing failures. We must avoid shenanigans to make teachers and schools look good. We need true evaluations."

The principal of a private school asserted that reform must begin at the bottom, not come from the top down. If a student can't jump six feet, do you raise the bar to seven feet? What happens to this "at risk" child as scores go up on paper? Teachers are now working toward test scores rather than teaching the curriculum. Quality education begins in the classroom.

There is definitely a crisis in public opinion concerning the quality of education being provided. The public believes that testing is the answer. Some point out that lawyers and doctors are tested, and there must be accountability. States are responding to the outcry, moving toward teacher testing designed to assure basic skills in reading, language and math. However, tests on content knowledge have little to do with performance.

Following this program, I wondered if things were as bad as we had heard. Are our schools producing citizens or a defective product? A recent survey by People for the American Way gave a disturbing answer.

Our young people are materialistic and self-centered primarily interested in obtaining a lucrative job in order to have fun. They believe what one owns is more important than what one is. Not surprisingly, the survey concluded, "America's youth are alarmingly ill-prepared to keep democracy alive."

means frozen pipes should begin to thaw.

"We will get more no water complaints first," Piland said. "Then, calls for flooded homes."

Police Seek Breeze-In Thief

Virginia Beach Crime Solvers would like the community's help identifying an artist's drawing of a man who robbed a convenience store. During the robbery the clerk received a cut on her face that required 16 stitches.

Last summer, on Friday, June 23, at 3:15 a.m., a man walked into the Breeze-In convenience store at 1501 Lynnhaven Parkway. He went behind the counter, grabbed the clerk, pulled a knife and demanded money. When the clerk had difficulty opening the register, the robber became abusive and cut the clerk on her face. The robber got a small amount of cash before running out the front door.

The man police are looking for is described as black, in his 20s, about 5' 7" tall, 160 pounds, with short black hair, a mustache and goatee.

Anyone who knows this man, can call Crime Solvers anonymously at 427-0000. If information leads to an arrest in this or any other crime, callers will receive a cash reward of up to $1,000.

Oceana SEAP Offers Programs

The Oceana Spouse Employment Assistance Program will offer "Job Readiness: The Complete Job Search," on Tuesday, Jan. 9 from 0900 to 1300 at the old First Lieutenant's building (diagonal from McDonald's) on NAS Oceana and again on Wednesday, Jan. 24 from 1800 to 2100 at the Navy Family Services Center.

"Job Readiness" turns the task of finding a job into a logical, step-by-step process. This workshop covers self-assessment, resume writing, job search techniques, resources, the hidden job market, effective interviewing and more.

The Oceana Spouse Employment Program will also offer C.A.R.E., (Counseling Assistance Regarding Employment), on Wednesday afternoons from 1300 to 1530 Jan. 10 and 17 at the Navy Family Service Center, building 333.

C.A.R.E. is designed to provide SEAP clients with further one-on-one assistance on with resume writing, SF-171 preparation, interviewing, and other employment concerns. Attendance at a previous SEAP workshop is required.

The Oceana Spouse Employment Assistance Program will offer "Understanding and Entering Federal Employment" on Thursday, Jan. 4 from 0830 to 1130 at the Navy Family Service Center, building 333.

This seminar explains the civil service application process and test requirements and guides participants in completing the lengthy, and often confusing, SF-171 application form. This seminar is reserved for military spouses.

For more information or to register call the NFSC at 433-2912.

City Jail Has New Art Program To Help Maintain Inmate Order; Prisoners/Artists Displayed Artwork At Norfolk State University

By Karen Dalrymple

They've been called con artists, and that's exactly what they are, but in a different sense of the word.

Fifty-four male and female inmates, some rapists, murderers and robbers, at the Virginia Beach City Jail have taken on a new hobby — drawing.

Thanks to the Correction Center Art Program, initiated by Captain Willard C. Smith, assistant commanding officer of corrections, the inmates now have something more to do in their cells than watch television.

"It's a form of rehabilitation. We take people who have some type of artistic talent or those who don't have any talent at all," Smith said. "It gives inmates something to do, something to strive for."

The art program was founded in May of 1988 when Smith decided to put the doodlings on the inmates' outgoing letters to use. He then contacted Dr. Rod A. Taylor, head of Norfolk State University's art department, for help with funding the program.

"I started looking around for people to do the instruction," Taylor said. In the meantime, Taylor gathered a few supplies from NSU and managed to get a small amount of funding from the school.

Then, he approached the Beazley Foundation, a Portsmouth philanthropic organization. This year the foundation presented the program with a $19,999 grant for supplies and money to pay the program's two instructors, recent graduates of

Five Beach Organizations To Receive $100,000 For Their Artistic Efforts

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

The Virginia Commission on the Arts recently presented $99 grants to five organizations to help funding expenses from July 1, 1990 to June 31, 1991. Of the $2.8 million worth of grants, five Virginia Beach organizations were awarded a total of $100,803.

"It's a good strong program. They're continually trying to find more funds through the state legislature," said Michael Marks, director of the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts, which received a $45,855 grant.

Art organizations must have submitted an application for a grant by last March 1, according to Stephanie Riker, public information officer for the commission. The organizations are judged on artistic quality, effective management and service to the community.

"The general operating support grants provide organizations with funds to maintain stability and encourage advancement," she said.

Organizations must also submit a budget, tell how they spent their money in the past year, and report their income and funds raised.

"Anyone whose primary purpose is the arts is eligible," Riker said.

The Cultural Alliance of Greater

"The general operating support grants provide organizations with funds to maintain stability and encourage advancement," said Riker.

Hampton Roads, a regional, cultural, information and advocacy agency, received $7,473, which was substantially lower than grants it has received in the past.

Debra Burrell, the alliance's program director, said this year's grant was less because the commission has changed its criteria. The alliance has received a grant every year since 1984.

"It's easier a lot of times to get a project grant. It doesn't come by very many sources," she said.

The alliance, which publishes sketches, a newsletter with a calendar of events and is a sponsor of the Hampton Roads Business Cultural Awards, uses the grant to pay salaries, rent, phone bills, postage and repairs.

Health Services To Be Cut

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Public health services in Virginia Beach will be cut back 10 percent in most departments and 70 percent in dental care with the elimination on Feb. 15 of 25 positions.

Twenty-three health department employees will be laid off Feb. 15 because of a shortfall in state funding. The layoff would have come on Jan. 15 if city council Monday had not delayed the inevitable with a $58,733 allocation for an additional month so that employees would receive the required 30-day notice for layoffs.

In all, 25 positions are being dropped, but two are currently vacant. Dr. George Sjolund, health department director, said that all are part-time positions, including two dentists.

Speaking of state shortfalls generally, Mayor Meyera Oberndorf said that the "shortfalls are not coming in small amounts; they're coming in an avalanche."

The local health department faces a projected $199,149 shortfall for the current fiscal year because of state funding constraints (the local department budget was not approved at the requested levels) and revenue collections for the department are below the budgeted amounts.

The $58,733 being used for the 30-day bailout was in the operating budget as matching funds. It was not used because the state did not furnish the funds to be matched.

Sjolund said that state funding for the 25 positions also is not expected for the 1990-91 fiscal year.

The dental service, which will be hit the hardest, Sjolund said, because it is one of the smaller services, now serves 5,000 to 6,000 indigents, mostly children, a year.

It would cost the city $112,000 to take over 100 percent funding of the position for the rest of the fiscal year, City Manager Aubrey V. Watts Jr., said. If the yearly bill is picked up, it would cost the city $454,000.

Oberndorf said that the city could not make up for all the losses in state funding. She suggested that the General Assembly should be made aware of the problem and that Sjolund's staff write to the legislators. She said that council would send a letter as well.

The allocation was approved by a vote of 10-1 with Councilman Albert Balko dissenting. Balko said "This can go on and on and on. This is just the tip of the iceberg. This is something they're (the state's) doing but we're getting shortchanged."

Councilman William D. Sessions said that it was very regrettable that the cutback affects the basic health services and was concerned especially about the effect on the prenatal care program.

Sjolund said that the cutbacks will not affect grant-funded programs such as WIC, the program which makes essential foods available to women, infants and children.

Who Knows All The Boards, Commissions?

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Like a third-grader learning the names of all the state capitals, it would take some effort to list all of the city's boards and commissions — even for the people who appoint them, the city council.

In fact, said Councilwoman Barbara Henley Monday at a work session, there are "so many boards and commissions we don't see or hear from." She said that they should at least get a little guidance from council on what they are supposed to do.

She suggested changing the situation. Devote 15 minutes at the beginning of each formal session to hearing from various boards and commissions on a regular basis. City Clerk Ruth Smith has commissioned to scheduled boards and commission to let council know what they're doing.

As for the more active bodies like the planning commission and the school board, Henley said she would like to meet with them three or four times a year.

Rosemont, Plaza Elementary Students This Month Will See Japanese Dance Artist Saeko Ichinohe

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Thanks to Young Audiences of Virginia, Inc., a national nonprofit arts education program based in Norfolk, many Virginia Beach elementary students will get their first taste of the performing arts.

The organization is bringing famed Japanese dance artist Saeko Ichinohe to several Virginia Beach schools to "bring cultural awareness and arts education to the kids," according to scheduling coordinator Melinda Lawson.

Ichinohe, who is known for her combination of traditional Japanese music with modern dance, will perform at Rosemont Elementary on Jan. 12 and at Plaza Elementary on Jan. 19.

"It broadens their (the children's) outlook on life. They see the world with different customs, different lifestyles," said Rosemary Barker, chairman of the assembly program and a second grade teacher at Plaza.

Lawson said Ichinohe's program, which lasts 50 minutes, is both entertaining and educational. She Barker and the children have enjoyed a similar program last year, which featured dancers from around the world.

"The children were fascinated. They just sat spellbound. Even the little kindergarten children," she said.

Lawson said this particular ensemble is geared towards students in grades four through six, but Barker said each elementary grade will have the chance to watch the program.

Church-Sponsored Program For Seniors And Adults Offers A Number Of Activities; 70 People Expected To Attend February Program

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

About a year ago, five Kempsville residents came up with an idea.

Patterned after the Ghent Venture in Norfolk, the Kempsville Discovery is a program that offers Virginia Beach senior citizens, as well as younger adults, the opportunity to socialize, meet new people and get involved in outside activities.

"It's a study activities program for growing citizens; for those of us fiftyish and over," said program chairman Garnet Casey.

The program, first conducted last October, will be held again each Thursday morning throughout the month of February. For $8, participants can enjoy book reviews, travel logs, bridge games, slides from the Chrysler Museum, plant management lectures, guest speakers, musical guests and a light lunch.

The program is sponsored by several Kempsville area churches: Ascension Catholic Church, where the program is held; Beth Chavirin Congregation; Community United Methodist; Emmanuel Episcopal and Memorial United Methodist Church.

"We also include a religious-oriented class to make it a well-rounded offering," said program committee member Linda Courts.

The October program only attracted 35 people, Casey said, but she hopes the number will double in February.

"It's for anyone who wants to come. It's geared more towards people who don't have children at home anymore or retired people."

Inmates' Art Worthy Of Attention

The Virginia Beach Correctional Center has come up with a good idea. Since May of 1988, a handful of the jail's inmates have been participating in an art program. Just recently, their art work has been displayed at exhibits.

After walking through the cell block which houses only the members of the art program, it is easy to see why the inmates are so enthusiastic about their newfound hobby. First of all, there's not much else for them to do. Sure, they can watch television, but one can only take that for so long. With the cramped, overcrowded conditions that unfortunately exist at the jail, the inmates needed an activity to take their minds off their surroundings.

In each small, depressing room of the cell block, were one or two inmates diligently working on their works of art. The canvases were spread out on the metal bunkbeds and the colored pencils were everywhere. In between puffs of cigarettes, the inmates added more color and contrast to each original painting.

Captain Willard Smith, the originator of the art program, is obviously proud of his guys and the progress they have made. As we went into each room, he praised each and every inmate and their work. To tell the truth, I was also surprised at the work these guys can do.

Each inmate had drawn a number of paintings; I guess with so much time on their hands, that's understandable. The art forms varied from ethnic symbols, to religious themes, to cartoon characters and family portraits. It's amazing what these guys can do with colored pencils.

None of the inmates were "artists" before the program started. But with the help of two Norfolk State University art graduates, they've learned how to mix and use colors and actually make something out of it.

Not only is Capt. Smith proud, but so are the inmates themselves. Most likely, none of them ever knew they had such talent. Several of them are now interested in pursuing an art career or going to art school. As I took pictures of the inmates holding up their drawings, I could see the pride in their eyes. They feel important now, they're doing something good for themselves. And they're making their stay in jail a little more bearable.

Since the art program is fairly new, there will probably be several additions to it. That is, if the funds keep coming in. Without it, there would be no art program.

Hopefully the program will last. So far it's been nothing but positive. The inmates have a whole new attitude, the jail is staying calm and Capt. Smith, who is also the assistant commanding officer of corrections, is happy! — K.L.D.

Arts will use the grant as non-restricted funds, or funds that can be put towards anything, such as the underwriting of the printing of their newsletter. The center also receives grants for the support of its Art Camp programs for five- to 14-year-olds.

"There's a lot of different categories you can apply for from the state. Some of them are competitive," he said.

The Center for the Arts received the most amount of money of the Virginia Beach organizations, with the Virginia Beach Orchestral Association coming in second with $40,852. The alliance ranked third; the Virginia Beach Community Orchestra fourth with $4,123; and the Eastern Virginia Brass Society received $2,500.

Carol Noona, management director for the orchestral association, said the organization has received the grant for eight seasons, and last year it received more.

"It's predicated on what you do yourself, as far as helping yourself," she said. The association's money will be used to pay its 55 musicians, rent halls and buy music.

Riker said the money each organization receives is based on its budget and total income. Once the applications come in, she said, they are reviewed by the staff and sent to the regional panels of each area (Virginia Beach is region VII), where they are again reviewed and recommendations are made. The applications then go back to the commission for a final decision.

"They have to compete with other organizations. Just because they've gotten the money in the past, doesn't mean they'll get it again," Riker said.

Marks said the center has received the grant for at least nine years, and in the last five years, the funding has increased.

"We always have our fingers crossed that the state legislature will fund the Virginia Commission," he said.

Most of the organizations said they would apply for the grant again next year and hope that they are selected again. Most also agreed that they would have to cut back on their programming if the grants were not made available.

"We'd have to take a close look at our programs and unfortunately alter them in some way. We'd have to make some cutbacks," Marks said of the center, which has an annual budget of $900,000.

Burrell said the alliance would have to work on the private sector more without the grants.

"I would make very sure I got my grant request in by Oct. 1 so they wouldn't forget me," Noona said.

The organizations will receive their grants by August 1. Eighty-five percent of the grant will be given up front and after each organization files a year-end report, they receive the rest.

"You just have to be very mindful of that money and make sure you don't spend it all in one month," Marks said.

movie, which was filmed in Wilmington, N.C. Bush auditioned with more than 150 other martial artists for the role of one of the "Foots," who comprise an army of evil ninjas.

"They gave everybody five minutes to perform. If they liked you they gave you a wardrobe fitting," Bush said.

Two days after the audition, Bush, Charles Ambrose and Ben Odanga, also from Virginia Beach, were chosen for the roles. Bush worked for 10 days in a costume made of "stretchy metallic" material with knee and elbow pads.

"It was pretty uncomfortable," he said.

Bush was one of 30 "Foots" who were under the direction of the movie's villain.

"We were always trying to attack the turtles. Most of the time they were just beating us up," he said.

Bush, who took a stunt training course in fighting, performed in 10 different scenes kickboxing and using weapons such as swords.

"The main thing I like is fighting. I'm not into jumping off buildings," said Bush when asked about a career as a stuntman.

Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles is not the only movie in which Bush has appeared. Also due for release soon is Dragonheart, the martial arts epic in which Bush and Ambrose co-starred last August in Toronto, Canada.

Bush again played a ninja and had seven speaking lines. He had no lines in "Teenage."

"The main thing I like is fighting. I'm not into jumping off buildings." — Curtis Bush.

"I got killed in that movie too," he said.

Bush also appeared in Navy Seal, which was filmed in Virginia Beach last fall, and Mother's Day, starring Malcolm-Jamal Warner, where he played a prisoner.

"I love doing movies. It's fun. I'll just see what comes up," said Bush.

In between movie shoots, Bush is the co-owner of Karate International. He and his partners, Bob Fregin and George Kelly, have run the business, located across from the Great American Outlet Mall, for 15 months.

Bush, who has been practicing karate for 13 years and kickboxing for more than 9, will defend his title on Feb. 4 in Milwaukee, Wis. against the number seven contender Greg Espinoza. Bush, who also holds the North American title in the 147 pound division is currently 32-4-2 with 25 knockouts. Espinoza, from Detroit, Mich., is 11-1 with eight knockouts. The bout will be taped by ESPN, which Bush has appeared on seven times, to be aired at a later date.

"I've never heard of the guy I'm fighting. He's supposed to be pretty tough," Bush said of Espinoza.

He added that he hopes to get a crack at the world title, to be held in March in Northern Ireland.

"We're keeping our fingers crossed," he said.

Karate International will hold a Karate Kid VI tournament on Jan. 27 for children 12 and under. For more information call the school at 486-5348.

School And Arts: A Winning Duo

We all know how exciting it was to get to leave class in elementary school to go to an assembly. It broke up the boredom of the day and gave kids the chance to take their minds off school-work.

Well, several Virginia Beach schools will be hosting a performer, who should prove to be very fascinating to the kids. She's Saeko Ichinohe, a famed Japanese dance artist. She'll be performing a 50-minute show full of traditional Japanese dances, costumes and narration.

Ichinohe is coming to Virginia Beach with the help of Young Audiences, Inc., a group that specializes in introducing children to the arts by bringing both local artists, and artists of Ichinohe's stature into schools. Their main purpose is to expose children to fine arts at an early age.

Not everyone was lucky enough, while in school, to have performers such as Ichinohe perform at their school. Some schools probably don't have assemblies at all. Something of this nature should be conducted more often in schools, and not just for elementary-aged kids. Junior high and high school aged students should also be exposed to the arts.

With television and movies taking up so much of kids' time these days, it seems they need a change of pace. Fifty minutes of no sex, violence or drugs, which is what they're probably watching on TV, could do a child good. — K.L.D.

Kempsville Discovery Deserves A Look

Seniors, as well as younger adults, don't have to be bored anymore. Now, there is a place for you to go. Thanks to several Kempsville residents, the Kempsville Discovery is keeping a lot of people busy, not to mention helping them make friends.

Sponsored by five area churches, the program is geared towards adults who are retired or have no children at home. The program, which has been held once before, will take place throughout the month of February. It offers several activities, such as bridge games, slide shows, guest speakers and lunch.

And it's cheap, too. For only $8 for the whole month, adults can enjoy themselves. For many, it's a big change from recreation center activities and senior citizens' clubs, not that there's anything wrong with either of them. It's just nice to see a new face every once in a while.

To find out more details and dates about the program, see the article in this week's Sun. — K.L.D.

City Has Abundant Resources For Parents In Need

The Mayor's Report

Virginia Beach Mayor
The Honorable
Meyera Oberndorf

Parenting means responsibility. It is one of those jobs you work at 24 hours a day. When everything runs smoothly, the rewards are deeply satisfying. When problems arise, parents experience true heartache. To find solutions, parents turn to friends, relatives, clergy, counselors, or community resources.

In Virginia Beach, there are many resources for parents who need assistance on questions of parenting and child-rearing. Services range from parent education classes and parent training groups to child and family therapy services. Based on family circumstances, parents can choose from many fine private or public sector services. I will give you examples of the diverse services available in the public sector.

Informed adults parent well. Sometimes learning more about children and their development provides answers for parents. Child development classes are frequently available through adult education, community colleges, or local colleges and universities.

At other times, parents seek training in parenting skills. One city-wide resource is Systematic Training in Effective Parenting (STEP). STEP classes are regularly offered through the guidance counselors and PTA volunteers at the local elementary schools. STEP-TEEN classes are offered through the junior high schools.

Parent education is also available through the Family Training Institute of the Child and Youth Unit of Comprehensive Mental Health Services. One program, Between Parent and Child, is a monthly series of presentations at the local libraries on parenting children under the age of eight.

Another program, Creating a Rewarding Experience (CARE), is a group experience for parents of children birth to two years of age. The group is designed to train adults to become more effective and confident parents of young children. At the Mother's Center, sponsored by the YWCA, staff assist mothers of children to age five on all facets of child-rearing.

Families of children with emotional or behavioral problems can work with therapists or counselors across the city. Services are available through

1990 Will Be Challenging For Education

The VBEA Report

By Clair Polley,
President of the Virginia
Beach Education Association

The decade of 1990 will be a challenging one for education.

Noting changes in student population, course requirements, and job opportunities, educators know that the current public school system will undergo a transformation. Greater emphasis will be placed on helping students' master skill involving problem solving, long range planning and interpersonal relationships. Most of the futurists predict that the service industry will be one of the predominate employers of the next ten years.

Also undergoing transformation and change is the family unit and child care. Sociologists have made dire predictions about this country's future if something isn't done to encourage and foster child rearing and parent-child relationships. It will take commitment and vision to improve the current situation. Women will become an even bigger percentage of the work force and thus children will need dependable, quality daycare. Parents will also need additional help in rearing their children. Statistics indicate that those most in need, low income families, will probably be the last group to be serviced. Statistics also tell us that it is these children who are most in need of early intervention and preschool education who will be the last to receive help unless we make a conscientious effort to help them now.

Avance may be just such a program. This program, Avance, founded in

The population served is largely Mexican-American females who have at least one child under the age of three. The primary goals of Avance are to increase parental knowledge, attitudes, and skills in growth and development and to enhance family support systems so that parents can provide guidance, nurturance and discipline which leads to positive self-esteem, values and behaviors. The Country's First "State Of The Union" Message

By Lillian Youell,
Virginia Beach Constitution
Celebration Commission
Consultant

Two hundred years ago this week, the first president, under the Constitution, gave his first annual message to Congress. The Constitution's Celebration Commission of Virginia Beach will meet later this month to commemorate this historic event.

Article II Section 3 of the Constitution requires that the President shall from time to time give the Congress information of the State of the Union, and recommend to their Consideration such Measures as he shall judge necessary.

On Jan. 6, 1790, the members of both Houses of Congress returned from their recess to the temporary capitol in New York City, and achieved quorums for their second session. Two days later, President George Washington came in person to deliver his State of the Union message to a joint session in the Senate chamber.

Thus, he set two precedents: the time the message should be delivered and that it should be given in person. However, this first message did not set a standard. It was brief and general, a far cry from the extended remarks by 20th century presidents.

Washington's message opened with: "Fellow-Citizens of the Senate and House of Representatives: I embrace with great satisfaction the opportunity which now presents itself of congratulating you on the present favorable prospects of our public affairs. The recent accession of the important State of North Carolina to the Constitution of the United States (of which official information has been received), the rising credit and respectability of our country, the general and increasing good will toward the Government of the Union, and the concord, peace, and plenty with which we are blessed are circumstances auspicious in an eminent degree to our national prosperity."

In his biography, George Washington, Douglas Southall Freeman commented, "This annual message had been expected to be an important presentation of policy, but Washington's continuing caution deterred him from vigorous advocacy which, indeed, was contrary to his nature."

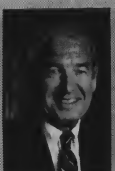

Washington did propose subjects for legislation, but often marred his suggestions with straddling language. From his experience in the military, his first major proposal was that Congress authorize the raising of troops.

City's Image/Public Relations Sparks Council Discussion

"I have never detected an iota of racism on the part of the (city) administrators or governing body," - Councilman Harold Heischouer. "Virginia Beach is not racist and never has been." - Councilman Nancy Parker.

"We all have sense enough to know what the voters want," - Councilman John A. Baum.

"The whole issue has become a darn-if-you-do-and-darn-if-you-don't (situation)," - Councilwoman Barbara Henley.

"We have the staff already here; we have the resources right here in the city," - Councilman John L. Perry.

The $300,000 appropriation for a public relations consultant is "not seen as interference with the (Chairman E.E.) Brickell (Labor Day) Commission," - R. Dean Lee, chairman of the Virginia Beach Council of the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce.

Reacting to criticism of the $300,000 allocation for a public relations consultant, approved on Dec. 18, on the basis of the cost and the timing, Mayor Meyera

Oberndorf placed the item back on the agenda on Monday for clarification.

The cost of the public relations advertising program may eventually escalate to $850,000, but the major criticism was that council had undermined a commission it had appointed by taking action before the Labor Day Commission had made its report and recommendations.

In a letter to council members dated Jan. 2, Oberndorf said that it was "unclear exactly what each member of council understands or perceives concerning this issue. Also, not every council member spoke his or her mind publicly. Therefore, I feel we need an opportunity to clarify the situation and I have suggested to the city manager that he wait for more specific directions from the council as a body."

Except for Councilwoman Reba McClanahan, who voted against the appropriation, council members obliged and made statements supporting the expenditure. Councilman John L. Perry, however, who also voted against the expenditure and has consistently criticized the city's handling of the Labor Day Greekfest, took opportunity to continue his attack. He said that the expenditure was not necessary, and that the city already had the staff to do the job.

McClanahan, who did not participate in the discussion on Dec. 18, did not participate on Monday, despite Oberndorf's specific invitation to do so.

Also, members of the resort business community also expressed their support. Linwood Branch, president of the Virginia Beach Hotel and Motel Association, said that business had declined during June, July and August, and that there was "a need for public relations and advertising to go hand in hand to accentuate the many positive aspects of the city."

He said that the $1.5 million in the current advertising budget generates a net cash return of $3.1 million. "Money spent on the city's reputation is an investment," He said that many people do not understand what public relations is.

Kal Kassir, representing the Resort Leadership Council, said that the 1989 season dealt a low blow to the resort businessmen. He said that the weather, economics and competition, as well as the unfortunate Labor Day publicity, hurt the season. He said that the tourist industry is a major industry and should be allowed to grow.

William Dillon, representing the Virginia Beach Restaurant Association, also expressed his support.

Lee said that the resort industry produces $30 million in tax revenue as well as jobs, many of which are filled by Beach citizens.

Heischouer said that there is a tremendous difference between advertising and public relations. "We can spend all the money in the world," but if PR is not in existence, it's to no avail. I never detected one iota of racism on the part of the administrators or governing body."

He said that he complimented the city manager for his proposal and "we must go ahead with public relations" to obliterate the city's "national black eye." He said that it was important to return the city to its rightful place.

Henley said she appreciated Lee's statement that the appropriation for public relations consultants does not interfere with the commission's task.

"We have to repair the damage to our reputation the same as we repair physical damage."

She added that the city should look at the focus of its own public information department. She said that the school system redirected its efforts from public information to public relations. "We may want to mirror what Dr. Brickell, a former school board superintendent, did."

She said that the city's public information department does an outstanding job and has the capabilities. "The good news from Virginia Beach just is not being told."

Balko referred to an early Tynkol public relations campaign which made Tynkol a household word.

"We have got to fight to retain our market," Heischouer said. "We can't let Ocean City, Myrtle Beach walk away with the Virginia Beach tourist industry."

Baum said that he sees a lot of good press releases coming out of the city, "but I don't see any of them in the paper."

Vice Mayor Robert V. Fentress suggested a workshop to go into the subject more thoroughly.

Councilman John D. Moss said that $500,000 (Watts expects to request $500,000 to $550,000 to implement the program) is not a lot of money when the cost of media is considered.

City officials have felt that the national press has treated the city unfairly, but Oberndorf said Monday that the treatment is "not unique to our city." She referred to the split-screen treatment on TV showing President Bush smiling during a press conference along side a scene of castrated containing dead soldiers from Panama.

In addition to her letter to council members, included in the agenda was a verbatim of the Dec. 18 meeting. She said her remarks were directed to "total support of expanding our economic base in a year-round effort. . . . I have never viewed this issue as a Labor Day 1990 proposal, nor did I see it as an attempt to give out anything but factual and correct information concerning our city."

Personality Profile

Herb Taylor Is New CCO President And Loving It

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Herb Taylor

With a background in chemical engineering, one might not automatically think that Herb Taylor would end up as president of the Virginia Beach Council of Civic Organizations.

But the retired chemist was recently appointed to this position and he's loving every minute of it.

"I just enjoy doing it rather than sitting around. I find it very interesting," the Sandbridge resident said.

Taylor first became involved with civic organizations when he retired and moved to Virginia Beach permanently in 1986. He became a member of the Sandbridge Civic League, of which he has been the president for two years. Through the Sandbridge league, he became more involved with the CCO.

"I enjoy working with others and seeing our community continuously improved," he said.

Taylor, who replaces Ron Makela as CCO president, is "responsible for the operation of the whole thing," which consists of 63 civic leagues.

"I've got a very good board working with me," he said.

Taylor's concern for the community is very evident, as he also belongs to the city's Erosion Control Commission. But Taylor wasn't always active in environmental issues.

Born in Wilmington, Del. in 1919, Taylor spent most of his summers working in the chemical industry. So it seemed only natural that he pursue his interests in chemistry in college. After attending several colleges, the University of Pennsylvania and the University of Delaware, Taylor received four years of credit in chemical engineering.

His first few years out of school were spent working as a chemist in the steel industry.

"I got into research and developing patents for aluminum alloys," he said, Taylor then entered the Navy as an electrical technician at the Naval Research Lab in Oklahoma. He also took classes at Oklahoma A&M University while he was in training.

Eighteen months later, after the European and Japanese wars were over, Taylor was honorably discharged from the Navy.

Taylor then went into the oil industry and worked as a technical advisor for the Houdry Corporation, which developed the catalytic process.

"I went into the steel industry as

"I enjoy working with others and seeing our community continuously improved." — Herb Taylor chief chemist for Vimira Steel Corporation in Pennsylvania," he said.

In 1949, Taylor started his own metallurgical testing lab, which he ran for seven years, until he sold it and moved to Pittsburgh, Pa. He then went to work for Universal Cyclops Specialty Steel Co. as chief chemist.

Taylor climbed the corporate ladder with that company and in 1970, "I was kicked upstairs to the ivory tower as manager of production planning for all the plants," he said.

Taylor stayed with the company until he retired in 1982. For the next couple of years Taylor and his wife of 50 years, Rose, spent several months out of the year at their home in Sandbridge, which they bought in 1971.

"We finally moved down here full-time in June of 1986," he said.

Taylor, who has three children and seven grandchildren, said he wakes up every morning between 4:30 and 5 a.m. and is on the go all day. He plays golf once a week with the Sandbridge golfers. He also grows vegetables.

"You name it, I've grown it. I enjoy working with my hands," said Taylor, who also has a workshop where he builds things.

As president of CCO, he wants to initiate ways to improve the city. He wants to make sure voters do vote in the upcoming spring election and he wants to improve the leaf bagging regulations of the city.

"We're just getting going on this thing," he said. "I enjoy it. It's a lot of fun."

The Individual Point of View

IS THE STOCK MARKET A GOOD PLACE TO SPEND 1990?

It's the beginning of a new year, and a new decade. Yet many individual investors are asking some not so new questions. Where is the stock market headed? Is it the right time to invest?

At Edward D. Jones & Co., we have an answer. It's the same one we've always had. Successful investing depends on a long-term strategy that includes high quality equity investments, not on timing the highs and lows of the market.

If you're considering the reasons not to invest in 1990, consider the reasons that kept others from investing in years past. It can be a costly decision. After each reason, we've listed what $10,000 invested in common stocks* then would be worth today.

January 1,

1987—A 2000 Dow is ridiculous. I know I've missed the boat.

1988—Where were you on black Monday? I was out of the market. $14,888

If you think long enough you can find a reason not to invest in 1990. But think about this instead. Equities are the cornerstone of most successful investment programs. A buy and hold strategy that emphasizes diversification offers tremendous value to investors, despite short-term market fluctuations. It was true in 1982 and it's true today. The stock market is a good place to long-term investors.

If you'd like more information on quality equity investments, call or stop by today.

Even Ducks Enjoy The Warmth Of A Sunny Day

On an unexpected warm day last week, many Virginia Beach residents, as well as ducks, took advantage of the sunny day.

"Among the many interesting objects which will engage your attention that of providing for the common defense will merit particular regard. To be prepared for war is one of the most effectual means of preserving peace."

He continued, "A free people ought not only to be armed, but disciplined; to which end a uniform and well-digested plan is requisite; and their safety and interest require that they should promote such manufactures as tend to render them independent of others for essential, particularly military, supplies. Neither House favored the measure to establish a militia."

Washington specifically addressed the Gentlemen of the House of Representatives: "I saw with peculiar pleasure at the close of the last session the resolution entered into by you expressive of your opinion that an adequate provision for the support of the public credit is a matter of high importance to the national honor and prosperity." It should be noted that the day after this address, a message came from Alexander Hamilton, the secretary of the Treasury, that he was ready to deliver his report on the public credit.

However, the House moved that the report be presented in writing rather than in person, setting another precedent. On Jan. 14, the House received Hamilton's First Report on the Public Credit. The paper reviewed information on the debts and recommended that the government fund the nation's entire foreign and domestic debt. Although there was little opposition to paying off the foreign obligations, bitter controversy arose over plans to fund the domestic debt.

Also, in this message, Washington urged Congress to set up a uniform system of weights and measures, to take a census, to establish naturalization laws, and to encourage inventions and communication through better roads and post offices. In addition, the self-laughed leader, conscious of his own lack of training, made a strong case for education.

He called for a national university and aids to seminaries of learning that were already established. "Nor am I less persuaded that you will agree with me in opinion that there is nothing which can better deserve your patronage than the promotion of science and literature. Knowledge is in every country the surest basis of public happiness."

Soon, another George will give his State of the Union message. He has agreed with the first George about the importance of educating the citizenry. In fact, he expressed his desire to be known as the "Education President."

ent-child education program could be adapted to our city. After their visit in May 1989, a proposal was submitted to a committee to explore the potential for implementation of this program. A pilot program has been suggested that would be located in a neighborhood and serve 24 to 30 participants. The program would feature on three-hour weekly sessions for a period of nine months, in addition, two home visits would be made to each participant per month. The proposed program is neighborhood based and would include an advisory board composed of representatives from the community, businesses, churches, schools, medical agencies, etc. Systematic evaluations would be held throughout the pilot year to judge its effectiveness.

This proposed program has been shared with various city officials, City's Human Services Department, Virginia Beach Public School Board and Administration, Navy officials in charge of specific housing units and United Way. The program has potential for implementation in our city. It is a positive start to deal with a long term and ever growing problem.

The VBEA wishes to recognize the hard work of all the individuals involved and hopes that such a program can be implemented without delay. The future presents many challenges but also many opportunities for improvement and success. This program will help children achieve and help our community thrive.

Lee Leggett, a Bellamy Manor Estates resident, attended the program in October and took the travel log and book review programs.

"It's something to do, meet new people and expand my horizons," she said. "I also renewed an old acquaintance that I went to high school with."

The program begins at 10 a.m., but a blood pressure screening is held at 9:30 for those who are interested. After lunch of soup and a sandwich at noon, the program will last until about 1 p.m.

"The people just enjoy the fellowship. I think that's important," said Casey. She added that the program is also educational.

"We think of it as an extension of programs offered by rec centers and senior citizens groups," Courts said.

Leggett, who has participated in AARP meetings for seniors and rec center programs, said both programs are good, but the Kempville Discovery is needed in the area.

"I thought it was wonderful, very well constructed. It just opened a new world to me," she said. Casey said the committee is printing brochures to distribute to local churches and retirement homes to publicize the program.

"It's hard to get the word out. We're trying to think of different ways," she said.

"We're just trying to reach as many people as we can to let them know we're available. A lot of people from Virginia Beach do go all the way into Norfolk for their (Ghent Venture) program," Courts said.

The Ghent Venture, which began seven years ago, now attracts 250 people to its programs, which are held three times a year, Casey said.

Comprehensive Mental Health Services, Pendleton Child Service Center, Family Counseling at Juvenile Court Services and Family Stabilization at Department of Social Services, to name a few. Counselors help children, adolescents, and parents develop strategies to minimize family conflict and build healthy relationships. For certain ingrained behavior problems, Pendleton Child Service Center offers a day and residential treatment services.

Some child assessment occurs, if necessary, when a child is in counseling. Full scale assessments of intellectual, developmental, and psycho-social performance are conducted by Mental Retardation/Developmental Disabilities for children birth to age three and by Virginia Beach City Public Schools for children age two to 18 years of age.

At times, parents can best help their children by helping themselves first. Support groups are available to single parents and their children through Parents Without Partners. Parents with chronically mentally ill children receive support through the National Alliance for the Mentally Ill. Parents who were abused as children learn how to parent without being abusive through the local chapter of Parents Anonymous. Other special interest groups for parents are announced weekly in newspapers, on the radio, and on the city's cable channel. And finally, if it is substance abuse or emotional distress that prevents an adult from parenting successfully, the Comprehensive Substance Abuse Program and Comprehensive Mental Health Services provide specialized assistance.

Parenting is both an art and a skill, one that can be learned. Fortunately, our community has abundant resources that parents can tap in times of need.

Inmates Keep Busy With Colored Pencils, Canvas

Beach scenes and cartoon characters are the main subject of this inmate's drawings.

Captain Willard Smith, founder of the art program, stands next to a drawing of himself, done by one of his students.

Ethnical drawings are a popular form of the inmate's art work.

NSU students, faculty and staff recently got a rare taste of art from a different perspective. Smith, along with four of his artists, who are low-risk inmates, held an art exhibit at the school's Wise Gallery.

Three-hundred pieces of art, primarily done in colored pencil and baby oil, with a few ink and charcoal, were put on display. The paintings sold for between $2 and $100 with the proceeds, roughly $747, going to the inmates. A portion of the money raised goes back into the art fund.

Smith said the exhibit featured various art forms, "anywhere from ethnic art to cartoon characters to abstracts."

"We tried to cater to everybody's desires. It was outstanding," he said.

Taylor said the exhibit, which was publicized on campus, attracted about 2,000 college students.

"They (the inmates) seemed very appreciative and they got a chance to meet some of the students," said Taylor, who treated the inmates to lunch in the cafeteria during the exhibit.

"I think they look at it in a different perspective. What really shocked the average student at NSU was that so many people who are confined can do that type of art work," said Smith.

Sheriff Frank Drew is also impressed with the work the inmates have done. But he adds, if it wasn't for NSU getting the grant, the program wouldn't exist.

"This program is not a necessity, it's a luxury. Any program that can keep them busy is positive," he said.

Drew said one of the biggest problems in the jail, which holds more than 500 inmates and was only built to house 168, is behavior. He said the program is one of the jail's tools for maintaining order.

"It's something they have to work towards to get into. Most of the people in here have some time to pull. It gives them something to do," Drew said.

Only 1 to 2 percent of the jail's population has been accepted into the art program. An art class is taught, by the NSU grads, each Thursday night from 7 to 10 p.m.

Several more exhibits are planned for Feb. 8, 9 and 28 at Norfolk State in celebration of Black History Month and ethnic art.

"We're on a roll right now. NSU has been a great help to me in this program," Smith said. "You'd be surprised what these guys can do with colored pencils and baby oil."

"They ran the whole show and they were well behaved. I enjoy having them here," Taylor said.

Taylor added that he is working towards getting the inmates college credit for being in the art program, as well as seeking more funding for additional materials.

"I think it gives them a great deal of pride," he said.

This is a typical scene in the cell block where the art students are being housed.

This inmate proudly displays his art work.

Kempsville's Library

New $1,685,000 Kempsville Library Completed; Grand Opening Set For Jan. 18

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Construction was recently completed at the new $1,685,000 million Kempsville Library. And according to area librarian, Judy Pate, the wait was well worth it.

"There was such a need for a new building because the original building was so crowded that we only had space for 51 cars and could seat 50 people. It just wasn't enough," she said.

The new 22,100 square-foot, one-story brick building is located at 832 Kempsville Road and was erected right next to the old library, which opened in 1969 during National Library Week. The former library will reopen in the fall of 1990, after renovations, as the city's fourth police precinct.

The new library's grand opening will be held on Thursday, Jan. 18 at 3 p.m.

Pate said the new library has been needed for some time, but the city kept lowering it on its list of priorities. Soon, Kempsville residents began complaining about the library's cramped conditions.

The old library was the city's smallest, but had also the largest circulation.

Dan McKay, a retired Point O' View resident and Kempsville Library volunteer, was one of the many who voiced their concerns.

"I wrote a few letters and tried to encourage the library and the city government to move forward on the expansion of the Kempsville branch," he said. Finally, in October of 1988, the construction of the building began. The proposed budget for the building was $2,187,944.

"It was really time to have a new building," Pate said. "You could never walk directly to where you needed to go, you had to detour around people or furniture."

Pate said the old library, at 6,017 square feet, was the city's smallest library, but it had the highest circulation. The library's service area consisted of 87,504 residents. Thirty-four percent of the city's

"That means they've used the li-

Virginia Beach Police Sergeant Paul Lanteigne Named Jaycees' 1989 Outstanding Young Person

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Sergeant Paul J. Lanteigne, head of the Virginia Beach Police Department's Selective Enforcement Team (SET) had no idea what was in store for him as he sat recently in a briefing at Police Headquarters.

To his surprise, Dan Ryan, Jr., of the Virginia Beach Jaycees, arrived and announced that the 36-year-old Lanteigne had been selected as the recipient of the Jaycees' 1989 Outstanding Young Person Award.

According to Pamela Falls, Jaycees public relations vice-president, the award is annually "given to someone who excels in their job and career and goes a step beyond to make a difference in the community."

"He has done so much for the community as a policeman and fighting drunk drivers," she added, not to mention he is a devoted father and family man.

In fact, it was Lanteigne's wife of 17 years, Tracey, who nominated him for the award.

"It was quite a surprise. She puts up with a lot - me working night shifts for the past 12 years. It's quite surprising she would do that. I guess, despite all that, it was very unexpected," said Lanteigne, a Back Bay resident who has been with the police department since 1975.

Lanteigne was chosen by an individual panel of judges, some non-Jaycees and past award recipients. The selection of names, which are usually submitted by companies, individuals and city officials, was narrowed down to two, and Lanteigne came out the winner, according to Falls.

"It was a unanimous decision," she said.

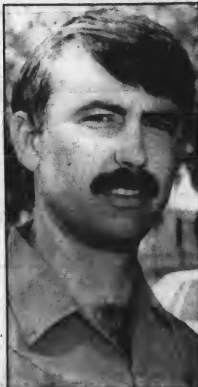

Although he's proud to have won the award, Lanteigne said it's not really fair that he got singled out for the award.

"I feel we (SET) do best a job as we can and enjoy giving back to the community what they give us," he said.

Other police officers have received the award in the past, including Detective Michael Derwent. Other recipients have been: the founder of Mothers, Inc.; Skip Wilkins, a paraplegic wheelchair athlete; former state senator Joe Canada and community activist John Langlois.

"It's important to recognize young people who are giving their time to the community," Falls said. "This person is really an example of what the Jaycees is all about."

The Jaycees, she said, is a young persons leadership organization, which has existed for more than 40 years. The Outstanding Young Person Award is presented to give incentive to others to keep giving to the community.

"If people give so much of themselves, they deserve recognition," Falls said.

Aside from his accomplishments in the police department, Lanteigne was also recognized for his community involvement. He serves as a substitute Sunday School teacher, Juvenile Protection Committee chairman of the Creeds Elementary PTA and is a Little League Tee Ball coach.

"I really enjoy working with the kids in the community. I try to do a lot of drug lectures with them. I've tried to be as active as I can," said Lanteigne.

As a recipient of this national Jaycees award, Lanteigne's name will be submitted for the state Jaycees award, then to TOYA (Ten Outstanding Young Americans) award.

The award will be presented to Lanteigne at a banquet Thursday, Jan. 18 at the Cavalier on the Hill. The guest speaker will be Beach Ford president Tom Barton. City and state officials, as well as business pillars of the community, will be present, according to Falls.

"For the Jaycees to recognize anyone is quite an honor. A lot of city employees are getting involved in the community," Lanteigne said.

Fourth Precinct Established

The City's Fourth Police Precinct To Move Into The Old Kempsville Library; No Date Has Been Set Yet

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

In order to better serve the citizens of Virginia Beach, specifically those residing in the Kempsville area, a fourth police precinct has been established.

The new precinct will be housed in the old Kempsville Library, located at 832 Kempsville Road. Still in the early planning stages, it is not known when the precinct will open or how many officers will be assigned to it.

"They haven't even started refurbishing it yet," said Captain E.F. Buzzy, assistant to the commander of the uniform division. "They have to change it from a library to a police station."

Buzzy said the rooms of the library are not applicable to the needs of a police precinct, therefore, "there's going to be a good deal of change on the inside of the building."

The 20-year-old building covers 6,017 square feet.

Although some police officers serving the Kempsville area work out of the first precinct in the Public Safety Building at the Municipal Center, there are currently 53 supervisors and patrol officers headquartered at the Woodstock Fire Station at 5656 Providence Road. There are no precinct desk officers at the fire station, but there is a room where the officers can meet.

"It was such a lengthy travel, we were able to open a substation and that's not adequate," Buzzy said. He described the conditions at the fire station as being "crowded."

The new precinct, which should open some time later this year, will have all the features of any other precinct.

"It will have a fully staffed precinct as we know them now. We haven't had a new precinct since 1967," he said, referring to the city's third precinct on Independence Boulevard. The second precinct, located on 18th Street, was formerly the VEPCO building until the

State Must Make Decision Over Water

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The state has to make a decision on whether it should continue to be the prime enforcement agency of federal safe drinking water standards or to turn the job over to the Environmental Protection Agency.

Public Utilities Director Clarence Warnstaff advised city council recently at a work session that the best interest of the citizens would be served if the commonwealth retained its primary enforcement authority under the federal Safe Drinking Water Act although the cost comes high.

Where now it costs the state $2 million for the program, the cost will increase to $6 million during the next decade. The federal government contributes $800,000 of the $2 million, but Warnstaff said that he does not expect the federal contribution will be increased along with the increased costs.

In 1977 when the city was first awarded "primacy," or primary enforcement authority, Warnstaff said, 23 compounds in the drinking water were defined. That number has risen to 30 and each year, Warnstaff said, the EPA will be regulating 25 new compounds. Some have not even been identified, he said.

The health department, which administers the program, would ultimately need $6 million a year and 90 employees. However, the department is requesting 20 people and $750,000 for 1991.

How the additional funds will be financed has not been determined, but it will eventually come from the localities. If a water user fee is used as the source of funding, two

SCORE, Econ. Deve. Workshop Set

The Service Corps of Retired Executives (SCORE) and the Department of Economic Development, City of Virginia Beach will jointly hold a workshop, "How to Really Start Your Own Business," on Saturday, Jan. 20 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Virginia Beach Central Library, room A, 4100 Virginia Beach Boulevard.

The cost of the workshop is $40. The workshop will feature a videotape developed by Inc. Magazine and furnished by the U.S. Small Business Administration, featuring successful entrepreneurs and will cover small-business basics. Each participant will be provided with a workbook with which to review the video material and to apply the lessons learned to his or her own business situation.

The workshop will be moderated by William W. Garry, Ph.D., national director of membership and training, SCORE, Washington, D.C. and Bob Cooke, C.P.A., management consultant, Virginia Beach. Retired businessmen and women from the local SCORE Chapter will be present to answer specific questions.

Attendance is limited to 30 participants.

DUI Arrests Up

Selective Enforcement Team Has Increased DUI Arrests From 1,400 In 1986 To 4,500 In 1989; Numbers Expected To Rise This Year

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Since its inception in 1987, the Virginia Beach Police Department's Selective Enforcement Team has increased the number of arrests in Virginia Beach for driving under the influence from less than 1,400 in 1986 to almost 4,500 in 1989.

Sergeant Paul J. Lanteigne, head of the department, said he expects to see a slight increase next year in the number of arrests.

Kempsville Library

More Convenience

Kempsville residents, as well as the rest of Virginia Beach, are in for a treat. Their area library, which has faithfully been serving them for 20 years, is now new and improved.

The library didn't really move, it's right next door to the old one, but it has been rebuilt to better suit the needs of its patrons. And it's about time. With the ultramodern Central Library getting all the oohs and aahs, it was time some of the city's other libraries received a facelift.

Now patrons won't feel cramped and crowded in the new library. Nor will they have to deal with rude people who insist on being noisy in the library. Now there are quiet rooms and more space - everywhere!

Surely, the new library will attract more residents than the old one. After all, it was the local residents who complained about the terrible conditions of the old library. It's good to know that the library system cares enough to respond to the community's needs.

The new library offers many more services, which makes visiting the library much more pleasant and worthwhile. Another added feature is that it caters well to children, who will probably benefit the most from the library.

The Kempsville Library serves as a convenient point of access to area residents, also. Although there are several other excellent libraries around the city, having one closer to home is much more beneficial. — K.L.D.

New Police Precinct

More Protection

With three other police precincts working hard for the city, Virginia Beach will soon have a fourth precinct to lighten the load. Conveniently located in Kempsville, the burden of driving from the Municipal Center will be lifted for some police officers.

That's quite a hike to the Kempsville area, although lately the officers have been lucky enough to have the use of a fire station so they can meet. The fire station is much closer to the area these officers are patrolling.

Not only will the officers benefit from the new precinct, but so will the residents. There are three other precincts in the city, but they are all quite a distance from Kempsville. The first precinct is at the Municipal Center, the second at the Oceanfront and the third on Independence Boulevard. Now the residents of Kempsville can be assured that their neighborhoods are being adequately patrolled and that there is a station "right around the corner."

A need for a fourth precinct just proves that the city is growing rapidly. The more people that come to Virginia Beach to live, the better. At least they know they'll be well protected. — K.L.D.

Rush, Gibson and Wexler

Monticello Trio Visits VWC As Part Of Dougherty Series

The Dougherty Visiting Artist Series at Virginia Wesleyan College will present the Monticello Trio in concert on Saturday, Jan. 20 at 8 p.m. in the Hofheimer Theater. The concert is free and open to the public, but reservations should be made by calling the college at 455-3200.

The Monticello Trio, the classical trio in-residence at the University of Virginia, is composed of Mark Rush, violin; Tannis Gibson, piano; and Mathias Wexler, cello. In addition to performances, each member of the trio serves as artist/faculty for the McIntire Department of Music at the University of Virginia.

The trio's tours have included performances in major areas, including San Francisco, Boston, St. Louis, New York, New Haven, Washington and Richmond. Future plans include a Canadian tour and recitals in New York and New England.

Reviewers have described the trio's concerts as "a luminous performance," by The Boston Globe; "an intense and thoroughly captivating performance," by The Washington Post; and "truly committed music making," by The Richmond Times-Dispatch.

The program for the Saturday evening concert will include Piano Trio No. 1, Op. 8, by Shostakovich; Duo for Violin and Cello, Op. 7, by Kodaly; and Piano Trio in B-flat, D.898, by Schubert.

The Dougherty Visiting Artist Series was established in 1978 by the Hugh L. Dougherty Sr. Visiting Artist Endowment at Virginia Wesleyan.

Brass Quintet Plays In Kempsville

The Eastern Virginia Brass Quintet will conduct a community concert on Sunday, Jan. 28 at 3 p.m. at the Virginia Beach Recreation Center - Kempsville. Musical selections will range from festive fanfares to classical pieces to toe-tapping show tunes.

The free concert is open to the public. For further information call 495-1892.

Virginia Restaurant Association Names New Officers

Several From Virginia Beach

The Virginia Restaurant Association (VRA) recently elected William R. Miller, III as its first vice-president for 1990 during its annual meeting held recently at the Williamsburg Lodge in Colonial Williamsburg.

Miller is president of Miller Enterprises, Inc., which operates the Duck-In restaurant. An undergraduate of Hampden-Sydney College, Miller obtained his master's in education from the College of William and Mary. He returned to his alma mater, Norfolk Academy, in 1967 to begin a career in education where he held a number of positions including one as assistant headmaster.

As a member of the VRA, he has served as third vice-president, secretary, and chairman of both the Education Committee and the Charitable Foundation. Miller is chairing the Chapter Relations Committee during 1990. He belongs to the National Restaurant Association, the Virginia Association of Independent Schools and the Mary Baldwin College's Advisory Board of Visitors. Miller is also president of the Lawson Forest Civic League and the city's Convention and Marketing Advisory Committee.

Kal Kassir has been elected third vice-president of the Virginia Restaurant Association. He owns the Corner Market Restaurant and the Bay Cafe.

A native of Baghdad, Iraq, Kassir has been in the restaurant business since 1964. He obtained a bachelor's degree in business from Western State in Colorado and has completed a management training program from the American Management Association. He opened his first restaurant, the Corner Market, in 1982. He is a member of Virginia Beach's Resort Leadership Council and chairs the advisory board of Princess Anne/Great Neck Commercial Bank.

This is Kassir's third year on the VRA's Board of Directors. He served as president of the Virginia Beach Chapter in 1988 and 1989. He is chairing the Communications and Public Relations Committee during 1990.

Victoriano C. "Buddy" Caramillo, president and owner of O'Sullivan's Wharf in Norfolk and the new O'Sullivan's Wharf Lynnhaven, has been elected a director at large.

As a member of VRA, Caramillo has served as president and secretary of the Norfolk Chapter of the association and has been involved in various Chapter committees. He is a graduate of Old Dominion University with a B.S. in finance and is attending Johnson & Wales University.

The VRA elected restaurateur William G. Dillon, Jr., to its Board of Directors.

Dillon owns and manages Abbey Road Restaurant, which he opened in 1982. He previously attended Old Dominion University and has worked as a stock clerk in a grocery store and was a waiter at the Light-house Restaurant.

As an active member of the VRA, Dillon served as treasurer of the Virginia Beach Chapter from 1986 to 1988, was chapter president in 1989 and is again in 1990. He is also involved with VRA's credit card program. Outside of the VRA, Dillon is a member of the Virginia Beach Jaycees and is serving on the Resort Leadership Council and Resort Advisory Commission.

Michael C. Savvides has been re-elected to the Virginia Restaurant Association's Board of Directors.

President of the Ramada Inn Oceanfront and the Black Angus Restaurant, Savvides has served on the VRA Board for the past 30 years. He held the office of president in 1971 and chairs the Awards and Recognition Committee and the Local Meals Tax Subcommittee for 1990. A member of the Virginia Hospitality and Travel Association since 1983, he is also chairman of that association this year. He was awarded the prestigious Restaurateur of the Year award in both 1975 and again in 1980.

The VRA is a statewide trade organization representing over 2,500 restaurants and foodservice facilities in Virginia. Incorporated in 1947, the Association takes an active role in providing information to its members and in representing them before various state governmental agencies.

Beach's Sister City Delegation To Visit In June

The Mayor's Report

Virginia Beach Mayor
The Honorable
Meyera Oberndorf

It is particularly pleasing to be able to share with the Virginia Beach community some exciting news regarding recent and future events involving our sister city - Moss, Norway.

Moss has been our sister city since 1962 when its citizens presented to our city the Norwegian Lady statue, which commemorates the rescue efforts of the Virginia Beach Life Saving Station on behalf of the Norwegian Brig, Dictator, which met misfortune in a storm and wrecked off our coast in 1891. Our Norwegian Lady is one of two exact replicas. The other twin is erected in Moss, facing west toward us and our lady.

Now the news! Last November, Kay Griggs, the president of the Virginia Beach - Moss Norway Sister City Committee, and her husband George visited Moss. Highlighting their visit was an office call on Mayor Bjorn Barang, during which the main item of discussion was the prospect of the Moss City School of Music Band making a visit to Virginia Beach in June of this year. While most of the details for the visit are yet to be finalized, we expect the band to be in Virginia Beach for the week of June 17.

We will report more on plans for the visit in succeeding weeks. For the present we know that the entire delegation will consist of approximately

We can look forward to the visit of the Moss delegation in June as a major event in expanding the special and historical ties between our two cities.

80 members, to include 50 band members between 12 and 18 years old, together with approximately 30 citizens of Moss, including the mayor. In addition, a reporter from one of Moss's two daily newspapers will accompany the group.

In order that our special friends from Moss learn as much as possible about us and our wonderful city and so that we can learn more about them and Moss, all of the band members and adults will participate in a homestay experience. One of the local high school bands will serve as host band, giving one or two joint concerts.

Nine Goals To Improve Education

The VBEA Report

By Clair Polley,
President of the Virginia
Beach Education Association

For nearly a decade, the national report card on education has given our schools failing grades.

Just last week, the Secretary of Education Lauro F. Cavazos issued this year's report card and once again he gave the schools low grades. I agree with him that from a national perspective, America must drastically help more children gain basic skills and learn more information than ever before. Agreement is easy, but how do we significantly improve our schools. Our national affiliate has some good ideas that I want to share.

NEA has just proposed a set of national goals for education to the Governors of America's States. Take a look at them and see if you agree that these nine goals could really help us improve our education of youth in this country.

1. Ensure that all children are ready to learn when they enter school.

No child should be allowed to fall through the cracks. Every child should arrive at school physically, intellectually, emotionally, and socially able to learn. Programs designed to provide prenatal care, nutritional support, health screening, and developmental child care must be made available to all families of young children in need.

Concerted efforts must be made to reach those adults who cannot read or write well enough to function as full-fledged citizens. Literacy is the necessary building block for the life-long learning opportunities that must be open to all Americans.

2. Provide a fully qualified teacher for every classroom.

All teachers should practice only in subject areas in which they are fully licensed. All newly hired teachers should meet criteria of excellence as established by the teaching profession. Salaries and benefits in education should be competitive with other fields that require comparable skill, preparation, and responsibility. Increased professional development opportunities

Should We Change America's Number One Song?

By Lillian Youell,
Virginia Beach Constitution
Consultant

A few weeks ago, the Parade Magazine invited the public to write their representatives expressing approval of a move to change our national anthem, The Star-Spangled Banner, to America the Beautiful. The editor reported that respondents to a poll in 1988 approved such a proposal by a ratio of four to one.

Representative Andrew Jacobs, a Democrat from Indiana, has reintroduced a measure that would make this change. Jacobs cites as one of his objections to the current national anthem that the music was written in 18th century England, then our enemy, by an Englishman, John Stafford Smith, as a sex and drinking song.

Not even in Virginia do we check a song's heredity before singing it, even though songs have genealogies, according to Carl Sandburg. In 1927, in The American Songbook, he wrote, "Songs are like people, animals and plants. They have genealogies, pedigrees, thoroughbreds, crossbreeds, mongrels, strays, and often a strange love-child."

The ancestry, birth and character of The Star-Spangled Banner were thoroughly researched and denounced during heated debates in and out of Congress. In fact, House Resolution #14, which legalized the national anthem, was turned down when first introduced in 1929. It was finally signed into law in 1931 by President Herbert Hoover.

My answer is no to the question about changing our national anthem.

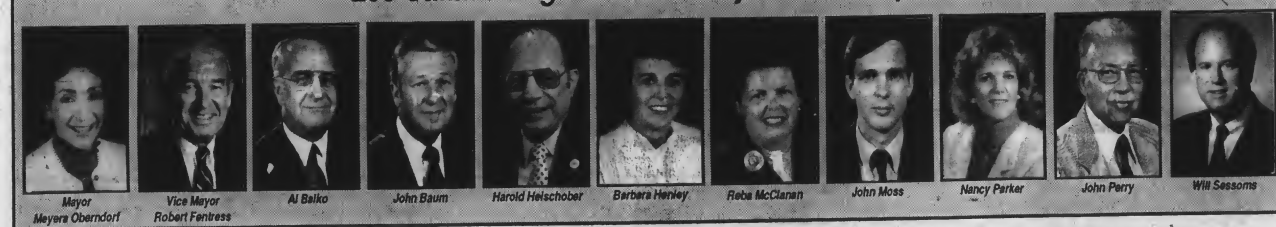

Arguments for changing the song have continued to the present. The same objections are repeated. Military men claim that it is useless on parade or battle fields because soldiers can't march to it. This is probably true although the great march king himself, John Philip Sousa, supposedly told Teddy Roosevelt that it was dandy for marching and the soldiers just weren't trying hard enough!

What difference does it make that it is difficult to march to as long as we have the wonderful Stars and Stripes Forever and other Sousa pieces for marching? Many object to the lyrics by the lawyer/poet Francis Scott Key, saying they glorify a minor battle. But had we lost Baltimore, we might be singing God Save The Queen today.

Perhaps the biggest objection of all is that our national anthem is just too hard to sing. That was discussed at length sixty years ago. In fact, the New York World of March 31, 1930 answered that charge in an editorial.

Lee Cahill's Virginia Beach City Council Report

Council didn't meet this week due to a federal holiday. It will meet next on Monday, Jan. 22 at 6 p.m. in council chambers.

Water

to three cents per 1,000-gallon consumption statewide would generate $4 to $6 million, which can cover the cost. The impact on the beach would be a cost $200,000 to $300,000 and a 12- to 18-cent hike a month for water customers.

Warnstaff said that it was important for every state to retain primacy to make sure the regulations will not retain enforcement authority and give it to the EPA, or the federal government can take away the authority if the health department does not have sufficient resources.

Warnstaff recommended that the coming out of the EPA are meaningful.

All but two states have primacy, Warnstaff said, but some states may want to get out of the enforcement business because of the cost.

The state can lose its primacy in two ways, Warnstaff said — the state can say the commonwealth city adopt a resolution requesting the commonwealth to retain primacy and to provide sufficient resources to the Virginia Department of Health to run the program.

The Virginia Section of the American Water Works Association supports the state authority because it believes the overall level of compliance will be higher, because the health department can provide assistance to small systems, and because the commonwealth can help shape and mold federal resolutions.

Warnstaff said that the changes in standards will be more significant in the next ten years than every before.

Some financing options, Warnstaff said, are federal and state permit fees associated with construction and operation of water systems and drawing raw water.

The EPA has admitted, said Warnstaff, that it will be impossible to have the same national standards all over, so that some discretion will be allowed. State control will cost the citizens more, but, said Warnstaff, the EPA does not always have the right interest at heart. The water works association, he said, is making sure that the regulations coming out of the EPA are meaningful.

Councilman Albert Balko wants to be sure that Virginia Beach will get back what it sends to the state in fees.

Warnstaff said that the fees would be assessed against the city and would ultimately be passed on to the customers.

Councilman Harold Heischobor expressed concern that Virginia Beach may be paying twice — once if Norfolk increases its water rate to pay for the added cost of primacy and once when the additional costs are added by the Virginia Beach.

Warnstaff said that the water utilities industry is committed to having the best drinking water, and the state will be better to work with than the EPA out of Philadelphia.

Warnstaff said that at present the state lab does not charge the localities for making tests.

Councilwoman Reba McClanan asked about the part the State Water Control Board would have in the program.

Warnstaff replied that the board has no jurisdiction over drinking water, only over bodies of water like lakes and rivers.

McClanan said that some of that is drinking water.

City Manager Aubrey V. Waits Jr., said that the difference between the functions of the two agencies is the difference between raw water and potable water. Local laws, Waits added, will not have the capacity to test many of the new compounds.

Warnstaff said that the scope of the Safe Drinking Water Act regulations is broader, and the program also will expand to include more sources of water. He said it was not clear where individual wells fit into the program.

Crime Solvers Had A Good Year

This article was submitted by Virginia Beach Crime Solvers.

1989 was another good year for Virginia Beach Crime Solvers. We would like to thank the many people who have made our program a success and share with you the highlights of the past year.

Crime Solvers assisted the Virginia Beach Police Department in the arrest of 327 people who were charged with a total of 804 crimes ranging from murders to larcenies. $361,581 in stolen property, and $596,352 in illegal drugs were recovered while maintaining a 98 percent conviction rate in cases involving Crime Solvers information. $28,825 in rewards were authorized by our board of directors for Crime Solvers callers.

For the sixth consecutive year, Crime Stoppers International, the parent organization of over 900 programs, awarded Virginia Beach Crime Solvers for solving the most cases for cities of similar size.

During the seven and a half years of operation, Crime Solvers assisted in clearing 5,008 cases, recovered $4,286,576 in stolen property and drugs, and has authorized $165,360 in rewards.

Crime Solvers and its board of directors wishes the Virginia Beach community a safe and happy new year.

should be made available to all school staff. The number of students preparing to teach should be dramatically increased with a special emphasis on recruiting teachers from minority groups.

3. End school funding patterns that make the quality of education dependent on the wealth of the local school district.

School funding practices that allow ever-wider gaps between rich and poor school districts are a national disgrace. Access to quality education must not be a function of where a child happens to live.

4. Make every school safe, drug-free, and environmentally sound.

Learning can best take place in a safe and secure environment. Our schools must be free from drugs, violence, and physical hazards — asbestos, radon, lead — that place children at risk. Dilapidated school buildings must be repaired and all buildings designed to maximize the effectiveness of learning technologies.

5. Provide the facilities and materials essential for innovative and creative learning environments.

Each school should make readily available the traditional and the technologically advanced materials and equipment essential for learning in the Information Age. Every teacher should be provided with the tools other professionals take for granted — a telephone, adequate work space, a personal computer, and access to clerical support — in order to ease classroom management and free more time for actual teaching.

6. Ensure that all students acquire the skills necessary to participate fully as citizens in our democracy.

Learning environments need to be restructured to emphasize the critical thinking skills so important to success in the emerging global economy. Teachers need access to assessment weakness of individual students. Teachers and all other school employees, parents, and communities need more opportunities to become meaningfully involved in the decisions that affect their schools. Schools need to implement citizenship programs that can raise voter participation levels in the United States to internationally competitive levels.

7. Reduce the dropout rate to less than 10 percent.

As the demands of society and the workplace become more complex, young people can no longer expect to find meaningful employment without, at a bare minimum, a high school diploma.

8. Guarantee access to higher education or postsecondary training for all high school graduates.

In contemporary America, a high school diploma alone does not guarantee adequate access to the rewards of American life. No student should be denied the opportunity to pursue postsecondary education or other appropriate training. Grants and affordable loans must be readily available to all students in economic need.

9. Eliminate functional adult illiteracy in the United States.

Concerted efforts must be made to reach those adults who cannot read or write well enough to function as full-fledged citizens. Literacy is the necessary building block for the life-long learning opportunities that must be open to all Americans.

In addition to visiting Mayor Barang, the Griggs were escorted on tours of two of the major industries of Moss. One is the Helly Hansen Company — one of Europe's leading and most experienced manufacturers of quality rainwear and survival gear for industry and recreation uses. The company is named after its founder, who developed and first manufactured "oilskin" in 1877. The other company is the Ving Card Division of Trio Ving Industries, a leading manufacturer of an assortment of physical security devices and systems, notable among which is the Ving card door lock system used by an increasing number of hotels and cruise ships for room security.

All in all, the Griggs report having had a pleasant and memorable visit, and were quick to sense that Moss and its 25,000 citizens are friendly, energetic, hospitable and anxious to expand its "people to people" contacts with us and our city. We can look forward to the visit of the Moss delegation in June as a major event in expanding the special and historical ties between our two cities and I know that each of you will be anxious to know more about and to participate in the visit.

If you would like to get involved as a "homestay" host or with the planning committee in any way, call Kay Griggs at 481-9355.

Quill

"What if school children could sing it? We should be so sick of it by now that we could not endure the sound of it... The virtues of The Star-Spangled Banner are that it does require a wide compass... So being, it has managed to remain fresh, not frayed and worn, and the citizenry still hear it with some semblance of a thrill, some touch of reverence."

A lot of us can't sing anyway, but we can stand with pride as others carry the tune for us. As Artemus Ward said in a lecture in 1869, "I can't sing. As a singer I am not a success. I am saddest when I sing. So are those who hear me. They are sadder even than I am."

Daniel Mark Epstein, writing about our national anthem in The Atlantic, July 1986, commented: "The tune is a test pattern not only for the voice but also for the human spirit. The soul singer, the rock star, and the crooner — all are humbled by the anthem. We have heard world-famous tenors and sopranos choke upon the low notes and cry out in pain at the high ones. We have seen the great Mahalia Jackson tremble."

However, he concludes, "The anthem perfectly suits our collective spirit, our ambition and national regard. So it ought to be sung by a crowd of Americans, to guarantee that all of the notes will be covered."

The lyrics of America the Beautiful are indeed inspiring and that song is appropriate on almost any occasion, but the lyrics of our national anthem are also inspirational and fill one with patriotism.

My answer is no to the question about changing our national anthem, but yes to the question is —

Oh say does that star-spangled banner yet wave, O'er the Land of the free, and the home of the brave?

of arrests, Lanteigne said, is because the SET received special training, or drug recognition training, to administer DUIs. Because of the excellent training, the Virginia Beach SET is now training other departments across the country.

Although more arrests have been made, Lanteigne said people are drinking a little less. To be considered legally drunk, a person's alcohol content must be .10. The average level for drunk drivers used to be .175; now the average has lowered to .15.

"We're seeing a decrease in blood alcohol content in people we're arresting," he said.

Lanteigne said all DUI victims must appear in court and most are convicted.

"Our main concern is to get them off the roads before they hurt themselves," he said.

Commonwealth Travel Is For Fun

Located at 1917 Laskin Road, Commonwealth Travel Center, Inc., offers a full line of travel related services, including planning meetings and conventions, and supplying travel videos for people interested in special vacations.

The company employs four full-time people, according to Gudrun Skelenger, owner, and several foreign languages are spoken in the office, she said. This helps people who are interested in international vacations.

Skelenger, who lives on Shire Drive and has 15 years of experience in the travel field, said she plans to host specialty fairs one night a month, where wine and cheese will be served and travel videos shown.

Australia is one of the most popular vacation packages Commonwealth offers, Skelenger said, which can be enjoyed for about $1,000 a week.

Chamber Now Accepting Small Busi. Nominations

The Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce is accepting nominations through Feb. 15 for its annual Small Business of the Year awards.

The awards recognize excellence among small businesses that are members of the chamber.

Virginia Beach.

Last year's regional winner was A Touch of Class Catering in Virginia Beach. Other local winners were: Arbor Landscaping (Chesapeake); Communications Plus (Norfolk); Clem's Gas Appliance Service (Portsmouth); and Cross Real Estate (Suffolk).

To nominate a small business, call Jo Anne Cawood at 622-2312.

Girl Scouts To Sell 1,000,000 Boxes Of Girl Scout Cookies

Approximately 5,000 Colonial Coast Girl Scouts recently took on the challenge to sell 1,000,000 boxes of Girl Scout cookies.

From Saturday, Jan. 13 through Jan. 29, girls will take orders for seven varieties of cookies.

This year's new cookie on the block is Cabafia Creme, a vanilla and lemon assortment. The six favorite cookies of southeastern Virginia and northeastern North Carolina will also return.

They are Thin Minis, made with natural peppermint; Trefoils, a low-calorie old-fashioned shortbread cookie; Samoas, the caramel coconut and cocoa coated cookie; Tagalongs, a peanut butter patty; Do-si-dos, a crisp and crunchy oatmeal cookie and a Chocolate Chip cookie sweetened with real fruit juice and rich in fibre.

All cookies sell for $2.25 per box. Funds from the cookie sales helps Colonial Coast provide programs for 1,300 troops and 15,000 girls in southeastern Virginia and northeastern North Carolina. Girl Scout programs are designed to help girls develop their potential to become a vital part of the community.

Restaurant Association Meets

The Virginia Beach Chapter of the Virginia Restaurant Association will hold its general meeting on Monday, Jan. 22 at 7 p.m. at Alexander's on the Bay, located at 4536 Ocean View Road.

Special Agent Craig Carpen of the ABC Board will be the guest speaker.

The highlight of the evening will be the awards presentation. Awards being presented are to the chapter member of year and the Distinguished Service Awards being presented to the associate members in the three categories of beverage, service and food.

For additional information on this meeting or the Virginia Beach Chapter of the VRA call Linda Gray at 499-5609.

The annual meeting of the Virginia Restaurant Association in Williamsburg was the setting as outstanding awards were given to the Virginia Beach Chapter as it signed the most new members of any chapter in the state during a chapter challenge contest.

Winning the first place position awarded the chapter a trophy and a check for $500. Local and state board member, Kal Kassir, was presented a VRA blazer for signing 12 new members.

Firefighters Hold Basketball Game

Tickets are now on sale for the Virginia Beach and Norfolk professional firefighters' association first celebrity combined basketball game set for Saturday, May 26 at 8 p.m. at Norfolk State University.

The game will feature "The Harlem Clowns." Guest speaker at half time will be Rosey Grier.

Tickets will be sold over the telephone during the day to businesses and to residences in the evening and on Saturdays.

C.J. Jung Announces Activities

The C.G. Jung Society of Tidewater has announced the following activities:

The group will hold a lecture by Dr. James Hillman on Friday, Jan. 19 at 7:30 p.m. in Virginia Wesleyan College's science auditorium.

He will speak on "Psychotherapy Revisited - Curing Therapy of its Narcissism."

Hillman will also hold a workshop on "Oedipus Revisited" on Saturday, Jan. 20 at the same location.

Both Pate and McKay said now that the new library is completed, more Kempsville residents will visit it. Another plus is that there are seven schools within one mile of the library.

"There are plenty of kids that could take advantage of it and they do. I think many were a little turned off by the cramped situations in the other library," said McKay.

Pate said Kempsville residents were polled and asked what they would want in a new library. The top four answers were: adequate parking (there are now 170 parking spaces); quiet areas; children's space; and separate the information service from circulation activities.

"The building is very well designed. Every inch of the building can be used at all hours the library is open," Pate said.

In addition to the residents' improvement requests, several other features have been added to the new library. A meeting room, called "The Kempsville Room," may be used as a quiet study room when it has not been reserved. A children's area has been included, where children, as well as parents, can go to sit and read.

"Even though we had such a small space in the old library, the parents would still sit in the room with their children," Pate said.

Twenty-two oversized desks have been added; children and adult services will be more emphasized and the book collection has increased from 75,000 to 90,000.

"Most of the new books are fiction and nonfiction for children," said Pate.

The library also features a 24-hour exterior book depository, which may be used any time. Located in the wall near the entrance, the books empty into the library's work room. The library's computerized catalogues have increased from seven to 19.

"We're hoping now people will not have to wait any longer to find out if the library has the information they need," said Pate.

"I kept feeding Judy Pate ideas from the beginning. I think it's come out very well," said McKay, who, along with his wife Alice, volunteers once a week for three hours. "The new library has the space so two-year-olds to 90-year-olds can find the space to work or whatever."

The library, which has been closed for almost a month, is including Sunday in its hours of operation.

"This is considered an experiment by the city to see if people will use the Kempsville Library on Sundays," said Pate. The experiment is also taking place at the Oceanfront Library.

"It is going to be a wonderful building and people will enjoy using it," Pate said. "We feel they'll be anxious to visit the new library."

Michael R. Melggs, local manager for Contel of Virginia, recently presented a $1,000 check to Mayor Meyers E. Oberndorf to be given to the Virginia Beach Literacy Project.

Green Run High Collected $570 For Operation Smile

The students and teachers of Green Run High School recently collected more than $570 in donations to help Operation Smile International, the Norfolk-based medical mission that travels to Third World countries to perform reconstructive surgery on children with birth defects.

Operation Smile donations were collected from students and teachers during home room periods, and through a donation jar in the school cafeteria. Daily donations were tallied on a large thermometer in front of the school library.

Green Run students and teachers were also volunteers on the local Operation Smile International telethon.

The School has asked its three Adopt-a-School partners - Josten's, McDonald's and R.K. Chevrolet - to each match a third of the total school donation.

There are or may be other persons interested in the subject of this case whose names and/or addresses are unknown and/or who live outside of the Commonwealth of Virginia and are joined as parties defendant in the caption to the complaint as "Parties Unknown."

CHANCERY NO. CH 89-3783
ORDER OF PUBLICATION

The object of this suit is to affect partition amongst the owners by sale of the real property of which the plaintiff and defendant each hold an undivided one-half interest.

An affidavit having been made and filed that the defendant, Herman Roland Whitehurst, Jr., is not a resident of the Commonwealth of Virginia and has not been seen or heard from for over seven years, and that there may be persons interested in the subject to be divided whose names and/or addresses are unknown and/or who live outside of the Commonwealth of Virginia and making them parties defendant by the general description of "Parties Unknown".

It is ORDERED that the said non-resident defendant, Herman Roland Whitehurst, Jr., and the said persons made defendants by the general description of "Parties Unknown" do appear on the 12th day of February, 1990 and do whatever is necessary to protect their interest.

It is further ORDERED that the foregoing portion of the Order be published once a week for four successive weeks in the Virginia Beach Sun, a newspaper published in Virginia Beach, Virginia.

Pet Cemetery

More Than 6,000 Pets Are Buried At Garden Of The Final Tributes To Birds, Dogs, Cats And Deer

Owners Pay

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Nestled on 20 acres out on Salem Road is a cemetery, but not the average run-of-the-mill cemetery. Garden of the Pines is a pet cemetery that has been keeping pets' memories alive for pet owners for 33 years.

"It's a final tribute to a pet who shared many memories with you," said the cemetery's resident manager, Cherie Blood. "A pet death is like a member of the family."

The property was left in trust by the late Jesse and Kathryn Mercer family. That way, no one could ever sell the land. Blood, along with several volunteers, oversees the running of the cemetery, which is now the resting ground for more than 6,000 pets.

"We bury around 300 to 400 a year," said Blood.

Animals of all sizes, from birds to deer, have been buried at Garden of the Pines. Dogs, cats, guinea pigs, rabbits, ferrets, goats and even a lion and a tiger from the zoo, have been laid to rest there.

Blood said people are becoming more aware that veterinarians, and even the city's Animal Control Bureau, dispose of dead pets by either throwing them away or cremating them. "This is beginning to bother a lot of folks. Many folks want to get away from the grief. They're leaning a little more towards the pet cemetery," she said.

Ruth Smith, Clerk of the Virginia Beach City Council, laid her Siamese of 16 years to rest at Garden of the Pines, which is the only pet cemetery in Virginia Beach.

"I couldn't just take her and dump her. It's the thing to do when you care about a pet," Smith said.

Burial fees range from $70 for a very small pet, to $270 for a small dog or feline, to $300 for a medium sized pet, $350 for a German Shepherd-sized animal and $425 for those as large as a Great Dane. The cost includes care of the site forever, the pine coffin, which may be lined in pink, blue or white, and a concrete foot marker.

A burial service is also held, including a pet viewing in the cemetery.

Recycle Saturday

Virginia Beach Clean Community Commission's Recycle Saturday Collected More Than 30,000 Pounds Of Materials; Next Date Set For April 21

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

"People are becoming very conscious of the fact that the earth is an important part of the planet. They're very environmentally conscious right now, which is good," said Ruby Arrondondo, Virginia Beach Clean Community Commission coordinator.

And that consciousness is paying off. More than 600 people recently participated in the city's second Recycle Saturday, recycling more than 30,000 pounds of materials. The first Recycle Saturday, held in October, collected 39,000 pounds of materials.

"We've been doing Recycle Saturday since 1988. October is usually declared recycle month by the governor of Virginia," Arrondondo said. The first actual recycle day was held in 1988 at Lynnhaven Mall.

This past October, the more than 21,000 people who participated asked the commission to hold the event more often, so Arrondondo said it will now be held on a quarterly basis.

"Once a year is just not enough," she said. "It's a very good indication that people are willing to recycle."

The most recent Recycle Saturday recycled 17,820 pounds of paper, 7,960 pounds of glass, 1,159 pounds of plastic and 3,303 pounds of aluminum. Seven hundred pounds of that aluminum was donated to benefit the homeless of Virginia Beach. The amount equaled $222.

The paper collected by Tidewater Fiber will be repulped and made into new paper, or will be used in egg cartons or insulation. The glass received by Atlantic Paper Stock will be melted down and made into new containers, as will the aluminum. The plastics can be remade into skis, surfboards, sailboat hulls and fiber-fill for jackets, cushions and sleeping bags.

"We're saving energy and our resources. It's going to be a lot better for all of us. We'll use other resources more wisely," said Arrondondo.

Although there are many benefits to recycling, Arrondondo said much remains to be done in the effort to protect the environment. The first obstacle to overcome product over-packaging.

"We get a little carried away with all the packaging. The consumer needs to tell that to the manufacturers," she said.

For now Arrondondo wants to get the word out to the community to save its recyclables.

A third Recycle Saturday will be held on April 21, in conjunction with Earth Day on April 22 and Clean Community Awareness Month.

"I'm hoping it will be more successful. We should have nicer weather and more people should be coming out to that," she said. "Everybody does their share. It's working."

Recycle Trivia

- ✓ Two week's worth of daily newspapers recycled saves one full grown tree.
- ✓ We throw away enough glass bottles and jars to fill the 1,350-foot twin towers of New York's World Trade Center every two weeks. By recycling one glass bottle, we save enough energy to light a 100-watt bulb for four hours, and we cut air pollution by 20 percent and water pollution by 50 percent.
- ✓ U.S. consumers and industry throw away enough aluminum to rebuild our entire commercial air fleet every three months. When an aluminum can is recycled we save enough energy to operate a television for three hours.
- ✓ Americans go through 2.5 million plastic bottles every hour, only a small percentage of which are now recycled.
- ✓ The nation throws away enough office and writing paper annually to build a wall 12-feet-high stretching from Los Angeles to New York City.
- ✓ Every year we dispose of 24 million tons of leaves and grass clippings which could be composted to conserve scarce and rapidly diminishing land fill space.

City Council Says Media Blew Health Cuts Story

By Lee Cahill

The headlines should have read: "State Abandons Children; Virginia Beach Picks Up Slack."

That's what Councilman John D. Moss suggested Monday as council discussed the shortfall in the Virginia Beach Health Department which would cut the dental program by 70 percent and other programs by ten percent.

Following public outcry over the cuts, reported in the Norfolk newspapers as a refusal of city council to fund needed care for indigents, the staff prepared a background report on events leading up to announcement of the cuts two weeks ago.

Council then actually allocated an additional $58,733 to extend employment a month to Feb. 15 of more than 20 health department employees scheduled to be laid-off.

Said Councilwoman Barbara Henley: "There's a lot of confusion about what we did or did not do. I saw our action as positive. I do not believe we refused to do more."

Council will have its Monday's agenda options for the city to consider. Having the item on the agenda will give the public an opportunity to address the issue, but

Sea Turtles Rescued By Marine Science Museum

Three live sea turtles — two Loggerheads and one Ridley — washed up in Virginia Beach recently and were taken to the Virginia Marine Science Museum.

Loggerheads are usually found here in May through October, prior to their migration south. Cold water temperatures are lethal to sea turtles. In order to raise body temperature, the stranded turtles were put into a pool of warm water at the museum and were given antibiotics to prevent infection. Loggerheads are listed as "threatened" on the U.S. list of Endangered and Threatened Wildlife.

A turtle exhibit will be opening at the museum later this spring.

Garden Of The Pines A Peaceful Resting Place

Stephen King's latest movie, Pet Sematary, may have many people a little leery about ever burying a pet, or even a relative for that matter. The animals, as well as the people in the movie who were buried, as in most horror movies, come back to life. Not every pet cemetery works that way; in fact, none of them do.

The Garden of the Pines Pet Memorial on Salem Road serves as a final resting place for deceased pets, not a set for a horror flick. People actually take their beloved pets, which have passed away, to the cemetery for a proper burial. Some may think this is going a little overboard, but these people are so attached to their pets they treat them just like people. Even the cemetery, and the services are just like those for people.

Burying your pet among friends, instead of having them cremated or tossed in the garbage can, is a great idea if you can afford it. The fees for the burial are pretty high, so it goes to show what value pets are to a family. Many people grow up with the same cat or dog, so of course it would be extremely hard to part with it. These people felt a strong relationship of love and loyalty with their pets, so they feel they owe it to their pet to provide a permanent and fitting memorial, a final resting place amid beautiful, peaceful surroundings.

The cemetery isn't scary or eerie, it's a well-kept, peaceful kind of place. There is even soothing music played over a loudspeaker that echoes across the lawns. It's the perfect place to put a pet to rest, if that is what you chose to do. Some people may prefer to bury their favorite pet in their own back yard. Either way, at least the pet will know it was loved. — K.L.D.

Recycling City

Virginia Beach Avidly Recycling Materials

If there's one thing Virginia Beach should be proud of, it's the commitment to beautifying the city and improving the environment. Citizens are showing their concern more and more, especially those who have been participating in the Virginia Beach Clean Community Commission's recycling programs.

Although there haven't been many, the Recycle Saturdays have been a huge success. Tons and tons of paper, plastics, glass and aluminum have been collected by concerned citizens. And the citizens aren't receiving hardly anything for donating the materials. They must not be in it for the money. They simply care about what's happening to the environment.

The materials that are collected will all be melted down and recycled in some way to remake products. It's a shame recycling isn't a law; so much paper, glass and aluminum goes to waste. It could be doing the community some good. There are so many benefits to recycling: earning some money (some donors received a small amount of money for their aluminum); saving energy and resources; increasing the useful life of landfills and reducing litter.

There are still many things that need to be done to protect the environment, but at least recycling is a step in the right direction. The key to successful community recycling efforts is citizen involvement, and it takes little time or effort. Start saving your recyclables now, there's another Recycle Saturday set for April 21. Remember: Think globally, act locally. — K.L.D.

Eliminate Costly Bureaucracy

Editor:

Proposed federal legislation, that ensures the funding of institutional care for children and is currently before Congress, is a threat to millions of parents in the United States who sacrifice a second income in order to give their children full-time mother care and to those tag-team parents working different shifts in order to provide their children with full-time parental care.

In addition, current federal proposals exclude those millions of mothers who are self-employed in their own homes, arranging their hours to give priority to caring for their children.

Also excluded are those women whose relatives, friends or neighborhood babysitter help with the care of their children when they are working or for those working moms who hire a nanny or caregiver to come into their homes to care for their children.

And finally, present federal legislation under consideration discriminates against mothers or parents who must work outside of the home and who choose religious or church-run facilities with religious activities. They will be denied federal funds or "Daycare Certificates" unless the religious facility becomes totally secularized, as well as submits to rigorous state regulations.

Government regulated, secular institutions, where eligible parents will be forced to put their children or forfeit all assistance, and enrich the bureaucrats, the regulators, the consultants, the network of tax-salaried lobbyists in every state, and the favored institutional care providers who know how to milk the system, is not what the taxpayers want.

Any system of grants, certificates or vouchers must certainly will require an army of tax-salaried employees to support such a complex babysitting bureaucracy, and we can't count on Pentagon budget reductions to fund this domestic program.

I urge all registered voters to immediately contact the local offices of U.S. Senators John Warner (441-3079), Charles Robb (441-3124) and Congressman Owen Pickett to request that they support President George Bush's proposal which will eliminate the costly bureaucracy and provide equal opportunity for parents and mothers by allowing up to a $1,000 tax credit for every preschool child.

FOP Awards Police Department Employees

Virginia Beach Police Department employees who are members of the Fraternal Order of Police recently received awards of appreciation during the organization's annual awards ceremony.

Lieutenant A.M. Jacobs of the Special Patrol, Operations and Tactical Bureau and Captain C.D. Hathaway, second precinct commanding officer, were recognized for exemplary leadership during the 1989 Labor Day weekend.

Chief Charles R. Wall was also recognized for his leadership during the Labor Day weekend and for his continued efforts to promote professionalism within the police department.

City Manager Aubrey V. Watts, Jr., was recognized for his dedicated efforts to promote professionalism within the police department and throughout the entire city staff.

The FOP also presented an award to Mayor Meyera Oberndorf for his faithful support and efforts to defend police and city actions during Labor Day weekend.

A Tribute To Douglas Wilder

The following poem was submitted to The Virginia Beach Sun by former Chesapeake vice mayor Dr. Hugo A. Owens. Owens is a dentist who practices in Portsmouth.

Let the rocks cry out and the earth groan
Let the hurricanes scream and the waves shout
This is '89 the year we'll flout Ancient ideas and prove What democracy is all about
Here in Virginia.

For 200 years we've mouthed the "dream"
But kept the creed of which we boast
Locked in hardened hearts and left to die
Or hidden like ghosts
in the attic of our minds
Here in Virginia.

Wake up you patriots of old
Who dreamed of freedom years ago
Let the spirits of Crispus Attucks, Salem Poor
William Flora and thousands more
Leap with joy for what we do today
Here in Virginia.

Where else but here should this be done
Where else but here could this be done done

'tis Virginia that bred the minds
That dreamt the dreams
That made this country great
The Washingtons, Jeffersons, the Marshalls too
But 'twas John Brown, 'Sojourner, Nat and multitudes galore who dared to make the dream come true
Here in Virginia.

Shut your eyes in reverence and thanksgiving

Stand tall with pride but bow your head in gratitude
That here in Virginia Anno Domini 1989
God has smiled on you.
No hurricane Hugo with which to cope
No quaking earth that rends the air
Yet He's shaken us from despair
And filled our hearts with hope

Again He has bred in Virginia
A new patriot

City Has To Spend More On Tourism Advertising To Compete In Market

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The city has to spend more on tourism advertising to compete in an increasingly more competitive market, James B. Ricketts, director of the Department of Convention and Visitor Development, told city council Monday at a work session.

Ricketts asked for an additional $545,500 for the city's spring/summer tourism and promotional program.

Aside from the negative publicity generated by Greekfest over the Labor Day weekend, he said that the city has to contend with changing conditions nationally. Other states and localities which have started to experience a drop in revenues are looking to tourism to make up for losses, Ricketts said. They are spending more.

Miami, which has a $6 million budget, is pushing for $8.2 million, he said. Resorts like Virginia Beach also are experiencing competition from mega-attractions such as Disney World, and cruise lines which, he said, are offering "tremendous packages."

Ricketts said that his department is finding a lot of apprehension on the part of the prospective convention groups because of the Labor Day publicity and that the staff is trying to determine the full impact of the event on the city's tourism industry.

He pointed out that eight percent of the city's tourists are black and "we don't know how they feel." He added, however, that other cities that have experienced similar setbacks seem to recover quickly.

The request for additional funds is unrelated to the $300,000 expenditure approved recently by city council to hire a public relations consultant to improve the city's image. Another $850,000 is expected to be spent to implement programs growing out of the consultant's study.

Councilman John L. Perry Monday made an attempt to have the city withhold these funds "for expanded advertisement efforts for tourism, marketing and economic development industry" until the Labor Day Review Commission, appointed by council, completes its report.

A resolution presented by Perry failed by a 9-2 vote with Perry and Councilwoman Reba McClanahan in favor. McClanahan had voted against the expenditure for a consultant.

The resolution pointed out that the marketing communications support program is perceived by some to interfere with the efforts of the review commission.

The total tourism promotion marketing budget for the current fiscal year, Ricketts said, is approximately $2.3 million which includes the printing of hundreds of thousands of various promotional brochures, a year-round tourism public relations and publicity program, special interest marketing programs for group tours, golfers, senior citizens, international visitors and other groups, and primary advertising campaigns in the spring and early summer and in late summer and fall.

Of the $2.3 million allocated for promotion, $1.9 million is to be budgeted for media advertising, he said, of which $908,657 is for media placement for the spring and summer advertising campaign ($756,657 for basic media advertising program and $152,000 for a cooperative TV advertising program with Busch Gardens in Williamsburg).

The additional funds requested would be for expanded media tourism advertising ($400,000), replacement of tourism publicity funds ($56,500), and $89,000 for an expanded tourism publicity program.

The expanded media tourism advertising funds would allow the city to add its own exclusive Virginia Beach television campaign ($300,000) and to increase the city's contribution to the Busch Gardens co-op program by $100,000.

An elevation of the return of advertising revenues showed by Old Dominion University says that in 1988 tourism advertising expenditures of $2 million generated $5.9 million in tax revenue or a $3.9 million net return.

The study also shows that the overnight occupancy rate for Virginia Beach hotels and motels, dropped one percent in 1989 over 1988.

The study also shows that while tery's chapel, where pet owners can spend time with their pets. If a pet's body is badly mangled, there will not be an open casket, but usually, Blood said, the pet is "brushed up and cleaned," but not embalmed. Blood conducts all the services. The cemetery also has two caretakers.

"We've had as many as 75 people attend a pet burial. It depends a lot on the people and how they can emotionally handle it," Blood said.

The coffins vary in size, depending on the size of the animal. An average single burial is usually dug 3 1/2 to 5 feet into the ground. If a family has more than one pet, the first coffin may be buried a few feet lower, so the next pet can eventually be buried on top of it.

"I encourage everybody to do it. It's a tremendous thing to do," said Smith.

"It's a final tribute to a pet who shared many memories with you," said the cemetery's resident manager, Cherie Blood.

But Blood said it depends a lot on a person's religious beliefs, financial situation and emotions.

"You've taken care of them and they you for so many years. They deserve better than to be dumped in a trash can," she said.

Blood said many people who bury their pets are accused of taking the death a bit too far. She doesn't agree. In fact, she conducts a free support group once a month for grieving pet owners. They discuss animal behaviors, counsel those who have lost a pet and "all the facets of animals past, present and future."

"You're getting them to live with a loss and go on. The sadness is here. The sorrow is when you walk on the streets and see pets being abused," she said. "Death is something we all have to face. You should never take people's emotions for granted."

Smith, who has been a cemetery board member for six years, has her pet's name on the foot marker, where other pet owners usually put their family's name.

"This is a regular cemetery. It will never be destroyed," Smith said.

Adopt-A-Highway Cleaning Up Our Highways

The Mayor's Report

Virginia Beach Mayor
The Honorable
Meyera Oberndorf

I would like to commend each of the 15 groups participating in Virginia Beach's Adopt-A-Highway Pilot Program for making it a huge success. During the first four months of the program, 225 volunteers have participated in 38 cleanups collecting over 20 tons of litter and other debris from our roadways. These volunteers donated over 571 hours of their time helping us keep Virginia Beach beautiful.

National Keep America Beautiful research has shown that people litter for three reasons:

- ✓ Where they feel no sense of ownership.
- ✓ Where litter has already been accumulated.
- ✓ Where they know someone else will pick up after them.

We believe our Adopt-A-Highway Program will address all these reasons by:

- ✓ Reminding all citizens that roadsides are public land owned by all of us.
 - ✓ Removing accumulations of trash that attract litter.
 - ✓ Reminding citizens that littering does not provide jobs for city crews, but instead forces volunteers to clean up after their friends and neighbors.
- If you are interested in learning more about the City of Virginia Beach's

Alcohol Should Be Included In Abuse Information

The VBEA Report

By Clair Polley,
President of the Virginia
Beach Education Association

You may have noticed members of the Virginia Beach School Board, Administration, Office of Community Relations and Transportation braving the cold recently to put out the first signs designating the area around schools as drug-free zones.

Virginia has new legislation that allows a stiffer fine or stronger punishment for sale or possession of illegal substances in areas around school buildings. This gives the police and the courts more authority and certainly will help in creating public awareness of the program. Signs will also be placed inside school buses along with the safety signs already posted.

However, posting signs is not the total drug awareness program. As many parents know, the school system has had a continuing series of drug prevention programs such as DARE and programs developed through the PTA. A new video program that will be viewed by students, teachers, and administrators stresses prevention, education, and how to get help for both drug and alcohol abuse.

What is interesting about the latest programs is the awareness that alcohol is also a drug that is subject to abuse. Official publications from the federal Office of Substance Abuse Prevention are now using the terminology of "alcohol and other drug use" instead of "substance abuse." The National Parent Teacher Association which for several years has supported and developed anti-drug programs is recommending that their speakers include alcohol in their anti-drug presentations at school meetings.

Unfortunately for our kids, alcohol is presented in advertisements as part of the life style of the "beautiful people" and illegal drugs are shown as being used by less than desirable elements of society; neither picture is, of course, true. So it is the hope of groups such as the PTA, the Office of Substance Abuse Prevention, the National Council on Alcoholism, and other advocacy groups that alcohol is a drug and that its use is being abused by many more people, including children, than we have been willing to admit. These groups have the statistics to back up their claim.

Legal Rights Issues Overhanging The 1990s

By Lillian Youell,
Virginia Beach Constitution
Celebration Commission
Consultant

Two hundred years ago, the legislatures of the original states were debating the rights of the people and of the states. The first ten amendments to the Constitution had been ratified by New Jersey, Maryland and North Carolina before the end of 1789.

Three more states ratified the "Bill of Rights" in January 1790. The bicentennial of that decision is being celebrated this month by South Carolina on the 19th, New Hampshire on the 25th, and Delaware on the 28th.

Rights never contemplated by our founding fathers are currently being heatedly debated. Harvard professor and attorney Arthur Miller, in a recent television interview, discussed three unresolved legal issues which the nation will face in the 1990s — the right to an abortion, the right to die, and Constitutional rights associated with the war on drugs.

It was 17 years ago this week, Jan. 22, 1973, that the first abortion case was decided by the Supreme Court. Many thought that Roe v. Wade had settled the matter. But Miller pointed out that the so-called right to an abortion is moving down from the Supreme Court to the state legislatures, following the court's decision in Webster v. Reproductive Health Services. Now the states individually must decide whether to sanction or criminalize abortion.

One cannot help but wonder what will happen when various states reach different conclusions. Will one state agree that an abortion is a woman's individual right; affirming the pro-choice position, while another state makes abortion illegal and supports the pro-life, anti-abortion position? Such confusion appears inevitable. In which case, this issue may again be presented to the high court.

In a column last fall, Alan Dershowitz called 1989 the "Year of the Fetus" and pointed out the complexity of the problem. Recent lawsuits have been brought — against an obstetrician for infanticide after performing an abortion, over custody of fertilized human eggs, and against a woman whose consumption of cocaine while pregnant injured her child. A Minnesota case before the Supreme Court concerned a parent's right to know, and whether a minor must notify both parents, even if living in a single parent home, in order to obtain permission for an abortion. These are just a few of the plethora of unresolved issues in this area.

council made it clear that the decision will be the public's.

It will be the Virginia Beach citizens who will have to pay the cost of additional local funding by the city for health care which has traditionally been a state responsibility. The state's share has been 55 percent and the city's share, 45 percent.

Figures produced by the staff, however, show that the total city support for health comes to $2,635,000 while the funds provided by the state come to $1,856,071. That's counting $1,445,558 for the health department, the additional $58,733, and contributions for obstetrical care, evening clinic supply costs, co-op program support, local option program expense, contribution to the medical college, grants to hospices and grant to the Beach Health Center.

The cost of maintaining the 21 positions (four vacancies will be left unfilled) to the end of the fiscal year comes to $194,941, reduced by the $58,733 already approved and $32,006 which can be redirected within the health department. That leaves $104,202 the city would have to raise from other sources.

E.D. Block, assistant city manager budget, recommended against the allocation of the additional $104,000. He said that Beach taxpayers would be double-taxed when 100 percent city funds are substituted for state money. He said that taxpayers pay income, sales and other taxes to the state to pay for these services. If the state does not return a fair amount to Virginia Beach for health service, local tax money is going elsewhere.

He also pointed out that the costs are not one-time items but will recur and will probably increase, and many of the services provided by the local health department are not mandated.

He also said that the contribution would set a precedent at a time when many state-funded agencies are experiencing cutbacks and shortfalls in the current year and in the upcoming budget year.

In fact, it is the anticipation of the across-the-board two percent budget cut proposed by Governor L. Douglas Wilder that has forced council to scrutinize 100 percent local expenditures for state programs.

The city is not only concerned with lower state appropriations but with the low per capita funding for the Virginia Beach Health Department. In Hampton Roads cities for 1989-90 the per capita funding was Chesapeake $7.44; Hampton $10.72; Newport News $14.92; Norfolk $16.28; Portsmouth $13.15; Suffolk $11.83; Virginia Beach $4.85.

At the same time, State Health Commissioner C.M.G. Buttery has criticized Dr. George Spolund, the city's health director, for using funds to serve persons above the poverty level while the state's first obligation is to take care of citizens whose household income is at or below the 100 percent poverty level.

The city claims that it has received mixed signals from Buttery who first said that health was a state issue and will be taken care of by the state and that it was not a local problem.

Block conceded, on questioning from Councilwoman Reba McClanahan, that the health department provides some services for citizens above the poverty level. He said that the state is concerned only with the most poor — in the first three (A,B,C) of six categories. It has been a practice of the city, however, to serve citizens in higher categories (D,E and F) and this affects the capacity of services.

Watts said, however, that all the services are not offered to higher income persons.

The options council faces are to do nothing more, to fund the dropped positions until the end of the fiscal year and to consider funding the positions next year which will probably have to be done during the operating budget process.

Council has already requested help from legislators in finding more funding and to change the city's per capita allocation.

Councilman Albert Balto said, "We're getting beat on the head." He said that Virginia Beach receives less per capita than all of the 135 cities and counties except one. He did not know which that one was. He said that if the Beach did not get some publicity on this issue, he would take out an ad himself. "There's no free lunch," he said, pointing out that the city's allocation rate came about a long time ago and has never been changed.

Mayor Meyera Oberndorf said that Beach demographics have changed, that the indigent population has grown significantly and that charges that the Beach isn't exerting enough effort through local taxes no longer apply now that the real estate tax has reached $1.03 on $100 valuation.

She asked Watts to take a look at what would be needed next year and see what type of revenue have to be attached to the citizens.

Block said he would be the first to recognize the emotional situation that exists, but "that the distortions and untruths in the press have unfairly painted council as 'scrooge' when in fact our Council had acted promptly to defer layoffs and has shown unanimous concern."

He said that the $450,000 to fund the positions for next year is equivalent to a .3 of one cent increase in the real property tax rate.

Block said that the city faces reductions in the state budget not only in health but in other agencies. He said that the city will receive less for law enforcement.

Watts added that grants have been frozen and that nothing is in store for recreation.

"We'll be seeing more of the same," added Heischboer.

Block said that even if the city contributes more to the health department it will have nothing to say about where it goes. "The employees are not our employees; the health department is not our department."

Who is laid off is determined by seniority.

Councilwoman Reba McClanahan said that she had already agreed to sponsor some citizens who wanted to speak on the subject next week.

Council is interested in taking action in time to meet deadlines of the 1990 General Assembly.

Sport Fishermen's Forum Set

The Virginia Sport Fishermen's Forum will be held on Saturday, Feb. 10 at the Virginia Beach Pavilion Convention Center.

Beginning at 8 a.m. and running concurrently with the first day of the Mid-Atlantic Sports and Boat Show, the forum will provide area fishermen with updates on fishery management issues regarding striped bass, summer flounder, offshore fishing and gill net conflicts.

In addition to covering serious fishery management issues, the forum will feature practical "how-to" fishing sessions. Tim Lecky, charter captain on Oceanmaster out of Virginia Beach, will share bait rigging and trolling techniques proven to catch bluefin tuna.

Claude Bain, director of the Virginia Saltwater Fishing Tournament, will discuss light tackle fishing methods that produce dolphin catches offshore. King mackerel enthusiasts will have an opportunity to share fishing information on baits and bait presentation with Randy Morton of the Virginia Beach Anglers Club.

Morton will be joined on the program by Harry Sikes of Wilmington, N.C., a fisherman who specializes in live-bait fishing for king mackerel.

Registration for the forum is $1 at the door and is separate from ticket fees for the boat show. The forum will be held in the Pavilion's Theater Rehearsal Hall, just off the boat show's main entrance. The Sea Grant Marine Advisory Services, Virginia Institute of Marine Science, College of William and Mary is the event's coordinator. Co-sponsors include the Virginia Saltwater Fishing Tournament, Atlantic Coast Conservation Association of Virginia and the Virginia Charter Boat Association.

Specific information on the forum can be obtained by contacting VIMS Sea Grant Marine Advisory Services, Gloucester Point, 642-7173; or the Virginia Saltwater Fishing Tournament office in Virginia Beach, 491-5160.

Refuge Volunteer Receives Award

Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge volunteer, Reese Lukei, has been honored as a first place winner in the 1989 Virginia Tackle Pride in America Program.

Lukei received the award for his work at the refuge and for his long term commitment to conservation and the environment. The award was recently presented to Lukei at the General Assembly Building in Richmond by The Honorable John W. Daniel, II, Secretary of Natural Resources.

Lukei has performed volunteer work at the refuge since the 1970s and, during that time, has had the opportunity to participate in many wildlife related projects. Most recently he has taken the lead on the construction of a 300 foot boardwalk and platform for environmental education use.

He has also been responsible for refuge osprey surveys and has been assisting with landscaping, bench construction, roving interpretation, and habitat management projects.

In addition, he has been actively involved with the presentation of educational programs for refuge visitors and has written articles for Field Notes, the refuge's quarterly information bulletin.

Lukei is now eligible for the National competition which will take place in Washington, D.C. Winners will be selected in the spring.

Bayside Optimists Earn Award

The Optimist Club of Virginia Beach-Bayside, has earned the Honor Club and Distinguished President awards from Optimist International for its community service work in the year ending Sept. 30, 1989.

The awards recognize the Optimist Club for achieving levels of excellence in youth service projects, membership growth, club administration and other areas.

Founded in 1919, Optimist International has 170,000 members in 4,100 Optimist Clubs across the United States, Canada and the Caribbean. Carrying the motto "Friend of Youth," Optimist Clubs conduct over 70,000 service projects directly benefitting five million young people each year.

Beach Students On Meredith's List

Three students from Virginia Beach have been named to the dean's list for the fall semester at Meredith College.

They are Holy Marie Bivens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Bivens; Kimberly A. Carroll, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Carroll; and Tara F. Reid, daughter of Nancy Reid.

For a student to be named to the dean's list at Meredith, she must have a semester grade of at least 3.2 out of a possible 4.0 and must have completed a minimum of 12 semester hours and passed all courses taken at Meredith.

Mason, Townsend On Dean's List

Jenny Mason, a sophomore, and Rick Townsend, a freshman, have been named to the Dean's List at Lees-McRae College for the first semester.

In order to be placed on the Dean's List a student must maintain a "B" average or above, with no grade lower than a "C." The student must carry 15 credit hours and maintain a 3.25 quality point average to be eligible for scholastic recognition.

Mason is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Mason.

Hofheimer Receives Pannell Scholarship

Kristen Diane Hofheimer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hofheimer, class of 1990, is the recipient of a Pannell Scholarship at Sweet Briar College.

The Pannell Scholarship which is named for Anne Gary Pannell, Sweet Briar College's fifth president, is awarded to students who have made a major contribution to school and community life and maintained strong academic records.

Hofheimer is a graduate of Kempsville High School.

Cox, Sutherland On Honor Roll

William W. Cox, son of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Cox and Matthew Taylor Sutherland, son of Dr. and Mrs. John H. Sutherland, are on the Dean's Honor Roll for academic achievement fall semester 1989 at St. Andrews Presbyterian College.

To earn recognition on the Honor Roll, a student must maintain a 3.5 grade point average on a minimum of 11 credit hours without a grade lower than a "C" or an incomplete grade.

"Glass Menagerie" At Regent

Regent University, formerly CBN University, will present an old classic with a new twist, Tennessee Williams' The Glass Menagerie on Feb. 2 to 4 and 9 to 11, with evening shows beginning at 8 p.m. and Sunday matinees at 2 p.m.

Tickets are $5 for adults, and $4 for students and senior adults, and may be obtained by calling the box office at 523-7222. Group rates are also available.

Jackson, Chesser Honored

Lorren W. Jackson III and Kerry A. Chesser were recently inducted into the Golden Key National Honor Society at Boston University.

To be eligible the students had to rank in the top 15 percent of the junior or senior class. During the school year, the students will participate in activities such as tutoring local students and working with Boston-area schools to promote drug awareness.

Church

First Baptist Hosts Coley

First Baptist Church of Virginia Beach will sponsor a "Preschool Celebration Night," Friday, Feb. 16 from 7 to 8:30.

This meeting, which is open to the public, will feature Wayne Coley, an expert in the field of preschool work with the Baptist General Association of Virginia.

The discussion, entitled

"Understanding Today's Preschoolers," will focus on helping parents of preschool age children to be the best parents they can be.

Preschool care for children birth to age five will be provided in the church's preschool facility. This program is free of charge.

Southeast Seven 12 Exhibit Opens At Art Center

Seven Southeastern artists were recipients of artist's fellowships in the 1988-89 Southeast Seven grant program sponsored by the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art (SECCA) and R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company of Winston-Salem, N.C.

Examples of their work form the exhibition Southeast Seven 12, which will be on view from Feb. 9 through April 10 at the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts.

The fellowships of $3,000 each are for the purpose of "enabling southeastern artists, of exceptional talent, to set aside time and/or purchase materials, and generally to enable them to advance their careers as they see fit."

The artists represented in Southeast Seven 12 are: Jane Anthony-Buckman, Arlington, Va., painting; Martha M. Dunnigan, Winston-Salem, N.C., sculpture; Gina M.

Gilmour, Charlotte, N.C., painting; Ted Saupe, Knoxville, Tenn., ceramic sculpture; Elizabeth Sutherland, Winston-Salem, N.C., painting; Xavier Toubes, Chapel Hill, N.C., ceramic sculpture; Robert J. Warren, New Orleans, La., painting/construction.

The fellowships were awarded by a panel of jurors coordinated by SECCA Director, Ted Potter. The jurors were Jacqueline Bishop of New Orleans, La.; Clarence Morgan, artist, educator, of East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C.; and Patrick White, educator, critic of Pfeiffer College, Misenheimer, N.C.

Over 1,300 artists from the Southeastern region entered the twelfth annual competition. The competition, established in 1975-76, is open to visual artists working in any medium and residing in the southeastern states.

The recipients of the 1988-89 fellowships had an exhibition of their recent work at SECCA in April and May of 1989. The exhibition then traveled to the Knoxville Museum of Art and the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts. An illustrated catalogue is available in the Center's "Articles" shop.

The Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art is a regional exhibition and education center dedicated to supporting and showing the work of artists of exceptional talent who live and work in the southeastern states of Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Virginia Beach Center For The Arts Presents Living Arts

The Virginia Beach Center for the Arts presents The Living Arts, a series of four live performances showcasing a sampling of talented, contemporary artists working in several disciplines - music, dance theater and visual art.

The Living Arts features solo and group performers of national recognition, all premiering works in the Center's Price Auditorium from February to June 1990.

Headlining the series is a concert by visual artist Terry Allen from Texas, who will deliver his unique, art-inspired brand of country, rock and blues music. Allen is well-known to Nashville fans for his energetic piano playing and biting humor; but he is also a painter and sculptor whose works are in the collections of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and the Museum of Modern Art, New York; and the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art. An Evening with Terry Allen is Thursday, May 10 at 8 p.m.

The Living Arts also includes the following performances: On Sunday, Feb. 18, at 3 p.m., Virginia musicians Madeline MacNeil and Seth Austen present American to Celcic: An Afternoon of Folk Music. Using dulcimers, acoustic guitar and synthesizer, their repertoire blends folk, classical and contemporary songs ranging from 16th century Celtic carols to Appalachian melodies to popular American musicals. On Sunday, March 4, at 2 p.m., Richmond dancer and choreographer Kaye Weinstein evokes the mystique of modern dance. She performs several of her solo pieces infused with informal discussion on dance as an art form, the craft of choreography, and the similarities between modern, ballet and jazz dance.

On Saturday, June 23, at 11 a.m., The Tortoise and The Hare, a popular children's fable and stage play, will be presented by Theatre IV, Virginia's largest touring professional theater.

The Living Arts is the first performing arts series organized by the Center for the Arts and is presented to attract and involve more Hampton Roads residents who are interested in multi-disciplinary arts programming. The Price Auditorium is an ideal, intimate venue for musical, theatrical, and dance programs. The series is funded in part with grants from the Virginia Commission for the Arts.

All events are open to the public and designed for audiences of all ages. Admission is payable at the door, although reservations may be made with advance payment. For details on ticket prices and reservations, to receive a Living Arts brochure, or for further information, contact the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts office at 425-0000.

Community Orchestra Holds Concert

The Virginia Beach Community Orchestra, under the direction of Conductor David S. Kunkel, will present its second subscription concert of the season on Sunday, Feb. 4 at 3 p.m. at the Pavilion Theatre.

Violinist Dora Marshall Mullins will join the orchestra for a performance of Mozart's Violin Concerto No. 5 (K. 219) in A major and Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso by Camille Saint-Saens. Also included in the program will be Mendelssohn's Hebrides Overture (also known as Fingal's Cave) and Rossini's Barber of Seville overture.

Dora Marshall, Mullins, well-known to Tidewater audiences, has served as concertmaster of the Virginia Symphony, the Peninsula Symphony and most recently the Roanoke Symphony. She held the position of first violinist with the Feldman Chamber Music Society for 37 years and served as music director since 1963.

The Pavilion Theatre is part of the Virginia Beach Convention Center located at the end of the Virginia Beach Expressway and has plenty of free parking. Tickets for the concert are available at the Pavilion Box Office and cost $5 for adults and $2.50 for students or senior citizens.

For further information call 471-2225.

Register Now For ArtSaturdays

Children ages seven through 12 may register until Jan. 29 for the popular "ArtSaturdays" program, held throughout February at the Virginia Beach Center for the Arts.

In the Mood is the theme for four hands-on art lessons held Feb. 3, 10, 17 and 24. Painting, drawing, sculpture and drama and "theater play" are all explored. Two sessions are scheduled: 10 a.m. to noon for ages seven to nine; and 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. for ages 10 to 12.

Tuition and materials for February ArtSaturdays is $40 per child, with a VBCA family membership; and $50 per child for nonmembers. Scholarships are available for families with financial need. Registration is accepted in person, through the mail, or over the telephone with a credit card.

Brass Quintet Begins Series

The Eastern Virginia Brass Quintet will begin its 1990 community concert series on Sunday, Jan. 28 at 3 p.m. at the Kempsville Recreation Center.

The concert is free and open to the public.

Musical selections will include traditional brass fare from Gabriele and Frackenhofel to popular works like West Side Story by Leonard Bernstein and Ain't Misbehavin' by Fats Waller.

Personality Profile

Great Neck Point Restaurateur Bill Miller Named Virginia Restaurant Association V.P.

By Karen Dellymple
Staff Writer

William R. Miller has come a long way since working in his parents' restaurant as a teenager.

The recently elected first vice-president of the state of Virginia Restaurant Association now owns the family business, the Duck-In.

"I worked at the Duck-In as an oyster shucker and dishwasher," said the Great Neck Point resident, who now employs around 100 people.

Miller grew up in the restaurant, or food, business. Born in Norfolk, he was raised in what was then Princess Anne County, now Virginia Beach, in the Great Neck Point area. His family, which opened the Duck-In in 1952, also had several other businesses. They

During those 14 years, Miller moved up the ladder to guidance counselor, director of the middle school, director of the upper school and then to assistant headmaster. For ten years Miller and his wife, Stuart, and their three children, Amy, 16, Will, 14 and Kate, 11, lived in a five-bedroom house on campus.

In 1981 several changes occurred in Miller's life. He left Norfolk Academy in order to take over the family business. He also built a house on Great Neck Point, "where our chicken house was growing up."

Since he took over the restaurant, the Duck-In has doubled its size, a result of a major expansion in 1982. Two smaller renovations in 1985 and 1988 also took place.

"I will continue to operate a successful business and continue to provide for my family and my employees and try to do what I can for others." — William Miller, first vice-president, Virginia Restaurant Association.

ran the gift shop at the airport; concessions on ferries that used to run; and food concessions on fishing piers and bowling alleys.

As familiar as he was with the restaurant business, Miller had other plans after graduating in 1962 from Norfolk Academy. He soon received his bachelor's degree in biology from Hampden-Sydney College, where he also wrestled and played football.

"The sciences and math were where my interest was," he said.

During college he entered the Marine Corp Reserves from 1963 to 1965. He then attended the College of William and Mary, where he received his master's degree in education.

Miller wanted to teach, so it only seemed natural to return to his old alma mater, Norfolk Academy.

"I spent 14 years at Norfolk Academy. I started teaching math and coaching wrestling and football," he said.

"I have excellent managers who work for me. I supervise and I'm responsible for the business and I'm blessed with some good management," Miller said.

Although he's changed professions, Miller still keeps in close contact with Norfolk Academy. His children attend the school, so "I'm out there a lot, but not in an official capacity."

Miller is not wrapped up in the restaurant business. He became involved with the Virginia Restaurant Association in 1982. He served as president of the Virginia Beach chapter and was on the board of directors for the state VRA, as well as holding several offices, including his current one. Being vice-president this year automatically makes him president next year.

Miller is also involved in the VRA Charitable Foundation, a nonprofit, statewide foundation "to help folks or charities who need funds."

VRA First Vice-President,
William Miller

As VRA vice-president, Miller's main responsibility is to "encourage development and growth of existing chapters and create new chapters where none exist now," he said.

Miller, who also enjoys fishing, hunting and sailing, works closely with the Cape Henry Rotary Club. Six years ago he initiated the Chesapeake Challenge Regatta, a fund-raiser for the Chesapeake Bay Foundation. The event is now co-sponsored by the Rotary Club and the Duck-In.

Miller said he would not change a thing about his life. He said he is grateful for being blessed with a wonderful wife, children and business.

"I will continue to operate a successful business and continue to provide for my family and my employees and try to do what I can for others," he said. "I'm trying to take one day at a time, and do what I think is right as best I can."

Health Cuts

Obernordorf said she would like to get local legislators to sponsor a movement to increase the city's per capita allocation. For that the city council will need a resolution.

"I hope we don't give up," said Balko.

Henley said that all human services should be addressed in the same manner. I hope the public understands they're coming down here to fund what the state does not. It's double taxation." She said that the city has to do in informational job. "The simple perception out there is that there is only a need for $110,000."

Councilman John D. Moss said that the two percent cut would have its biggest impact on education. Compared to that, "health care will look like a nonproblem," he said. "We don't know what's going to happen," concluded Heischberger.

Social Security

Check S.S. Number On Pay Stubs

To protect their Social Security earnings records, Virginia Beach workers are urged to check the Social Security number and name shown on their pay stubs to make sure they are correct. They should also check the Social Security number and the name on the Form W-2 they receive in January.

If a person discovers that the Social Security number on his or her pay stub or Form W-2 is different from that on his or Social Security card, the error should be reported to the employer immediately.

The Form W-2 wage and tax statement is used by employers to report wages to the Social Security Administration where each worker's lifetime earnings records are maintained. The earnings records are the basis for benefits when a person retires, dies, or becomes disabled. A difference in a single digit can delay or prevent the earnings from being credited to the correct record.

Many female workers forget to change their names after they marry. Employers should not permit the employee to rely on his or her memory in checking the Form W-2 or pay records but should insist that the Social Security card is used. Very often the mistake in the employer records resulted from the employee memorizing the number.

When a mistake is reported to an employer, a corrected wage report should be sent to the Social Security office if it is necessary to change a name in Social Security records.

Employees should check the earnings credited to their Social Security earnings records at least once every three years, especially if they change jobs frequently. A form can be obtained by calling 1-800-234-5772 or from any Social Security office.

The nearest Social Security Office is located in the Federal Building, room 600, 200 Granby Street. The office is open from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Early Retirement Growing In Popularity

Early retirement is growing in popularity in Virginia Beach as an increasing number of people become eligible for a public or private pension. Well over half of all nonfarm workers are under a pension plan, especially those with above average wages.

There are some important facts you should know if you start getting a pension before 62. That is the earliest age you can get Social Security retirement checks.

First, your Social Security check may be smaller than you figured. This is because benefits are based on your average lifetime covered earnings. A maximum of only five years of low, or no earnings, can be dropped out when computing benefits.

Second, you may lose insured status for disability benefits if you have a big gap in your earnings record. Most older people need not only a certain total number of Social Security work credits, but some of them must have been earned in recent years. In most cases, this means at least five years coverage during the 10 years before onset of disability.

To demonstrate the effect of these provisions, let us consider "Jane" who began receiving her State pension at 55 and has not worked since. If she decides to apply for her full Social Security retirement benefit at 65, several years of no earnings must be included when figuring her average earnings. Also, she will have lost her disability insured status in the last few years before she is 65.

For more information about Social Security benefits and the effect that early retirement may have on them, contact Social Security by calling 1-800-234-5772. The nearest Social Security office is located in the Federal Building, room 600, 200 Granby Street. The office is open from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Business

People's Names Flounder President, CEO

People's Bank of Virginia Beach has announced the appointment of Thomas E. Flounders III as president, and chief executive officer of the bank. Flounders will be responsible for all of the bank's activities.

Prior to joining the bank, Flounders was a senior vice-president of industrial development and government relations for Central Fidelity Bank in Richmond. He had been with Central Fidelity since June 1971, and had served as executive vice-president for retail banking services for the Hampton Roads area until he assumed his last position in Richmond.

Flounders is active in the Virginia Bankers Association as well as the American Bankers Association, serving on various committees within both organizations.

Before moving to Richmond, Flounders was active in the Virginia Beach community, serving as chairman of the Virginia Beach Council of the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce, as chairman of the Neptune Festival, as a board member of the Tidewater Council of Boy Scouts of America and as a committee chairman for the American Cancer Society.

Flounders holds a bachelor of science degree in business administration from Campbell University in North Carolina.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION
The object of this suit is for the Petitioners, Paul T. Littlefield and L. Diahman Mears Littlefield, to obtain the adoption of Heaven Leigh Rose Mear Littlefield. Petitioners pray that a Final Order be entered in the above-styled adoption allowing the adoption and change of name; that the natural father of the said child is unknown, whose address is also unknown; and that the adoption of Heaven Leigh Rose Mear Littlefield be permitted without the consent of the natural father, whose consent appears to be unobtainable, contrary to the best interest of the child.

An Affidavit has been made and filed that the address of the natural father of Heaven Leigh Mear Littlefield, an infant born to Claire Mear Littlefield on August 5, 1987, in Oahu, Hawaii, is unknown, and it is ORDERED that he appear before this Court on March 2, 1990, in the Virginia Beach Circuit Court, Municipal Center, Virginia Beach, Virginia, and do what is necessary to protect his interests.

It is further ORDERED that this Order of Publication be published in The Virginia Beach Sun, a newspaper having a general circulation in this City, once a week for four (4) consecutive weeks.

Personality Profile

Great Neck Point Restaurateur Bill Miller Named Virginia Restaurant Association V.P.

By Karen Delrymple
Staff Writer

William R. Miller has come a long way since working in his parents' restaurant as a teenager.

The recently-elected first vice-president of the state of Virginia Restaurant Association now owns the family business, the Duck-In.

"I worked at the Duck-In as an oyster shucker and dishwasher," said the Great Neck Point resident, who now employs around 100 people.

Miller grew up in the restaurant, or food, business. Born in Norfolk, he was raised in what was then Princess Anne County, now Virginia Beach, in the Great Neck Point area. His family, which opened the Duck-In in 1952, also had several other businesses. They

During those 14 years, Miller moved up the ladder to guidance counselor, director of the middle school, director of the upper school and then to assistant headmaster. For ten years Miller and his wife, Stuart, and their three children, Amy, 16, Will, 14 and Kate, 11, lived in a five-bedroom house on campus.

In 1981 several changes occurred in Miller's life. He left Norfolk Academy in order to take over the family business. He also built a house on Great Neck Point, "where our chicken house was growing up."

Since he took over the restaurant, the Duck-In has doubled its size, a result of a major expansion in 1982. Two smaller renovations in 1985 and 1988 also took place.

"I will continue to operate a successful business and continue to provide for my family and my employees and try to do what I can for others." — William Miller, first vice-president, Virginia Restaurant Association.

ran the gift shop at the airport; concessions on ferries that used to run; and food concessions on fishing piers and bowling alleys.

As familiar as he was with the restaurant business, Miller had other plans after graduating in 1962 from Norfolk Academy. He soon received his bachelor's degree in biology from Hampden-Sydney College, where he also wrestled and played football.

"The sciences and math were where my interest was," he said.

During college he entered the Marine Corp Reserves from 1963 to 1965. He then attended the College of William and Mary, where he received his master's degree in education.

Miller wanted to teach, so it only seemed natural to return to his old alma mater, Norfolk Academy.

"I spent 14 years at Norfolk Academy. I started teaching math and coaching wrestling and football," he said.

"I have excellent managers who work for me. I supervise and I'm responsible for the business and I'm blessed with some good management," Miller said.

Although he's changed professions, Miller still keeps in close contact with Norfolk Academy. His children attend the school, so "I'm out there a lot, but not in an official capacity."

Miller is not wrapped up in the restaurant business. He became involved with the Virginia Restaurant Association in 1982. He served as president of the Virginia Beach chapter and was on the board of directors for the state VRA, as well as holding several offices, including his current one. Being vice-president this year automatically makes him president next year.

Miller is also involved in the VRA Charitable Foundation, a nonprofit, statewide foundation "to help folks or charities who need funds."

VRA First Vice-President, William Miller

As VRA vice-president, Miller's main responsibility is to "encourage development and growth of existing chapters and create new chapters where none exist now," he said.

Miller, who also enjoys fishing, hunting and sailing, works closely with the Cape Henry Rotary Club. Six years ago he initiated the Chesapeake Challenge Regatta, a fund-raiser for the Chesapeake Bay Foundation. The event is now co-sponsored by the Rotary Club and the Duck-In.

Miller said he would not change a thing about his life. He said he is grateful for being blessed with a wonderful wife, children and business.

"I will continue to operate a successful business and continue to provide for my family and my employees and try to do what I can for others," he said. "I'm trying to take one day at a time, and do what I think is right as best I can."

Oberdorf said she would like to get local legislators to sponsor a movement to increase the city's per capita allocation. For that the city council will need a resolution.

"I hope we don't give up," said Ballo.

Henley said that all human services should be addressed in the same manner. I hope the public understands they're coming down here to fund what the state does not. It's double taxation." She said that the city has to do in informational job.

"The simple perception out there is that there is only a need for $110,000."

Councilman John D. Moss said that the two percent cut would have its biggest impact on education. Compared to that, "health care will look like a nonproblem," he said. "We don't know what's going to happen," concluded Heischberger.

Social Security

Check S.S. Number On Pay Stubs

To protect their Social Security earnings records, Virginia Beach workers are urged to check the Social Security number and name shown on their pay stubs to make sure they are correct. They should also check the Social Security number and the name on the Form W-2 they receive in January.

If a person discovers that the Social Security number on his or her pay stub or Form W-2 is different from that on his or Social Security card, the error should be reported to the employer immediately.

The Form W-2 wage and tax statement is used by employers to report wages to the Social Security Administration where each worker's lifetime earnings records are maintained. The earnings records are the basis for benefits when a person retires, dies, or becomes disabled. A difference in a single digit can delay or prevent the earnings from being credited to the correct record.

Many female workers forget to change their names after they marry. Employers should not permit the employee to rely on his or her memory in checking the Form W-2 or pay records but should insist that the Social Security card is used. Very often the mistake in the employer records resulted from the employee memorizing the number.

When a mistake is reported to an employer, a corrected wage report should be sent to the Social Security office if it is necessary to change a name in Social Security records.

Employees should check the earnings credited to their Social Security earnings records at least once every three years, especially if they change jobs frequently. A form can be obtained by calling 1-800-234-5772 or from any Social Security office.

The nearest Social Security Office is located in the Federal Building, room 600, 200 Granby Street. The office is open from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Early Retirement Growing In Popularity

Early retirement is growing in popularity in Virginia Beach as an increasing number of people become eligible for a public or private pension. Well over half of all nonfarm workers are under a pension plan, especially those with above average wages.

There are some important facts you should know if you start getting a pension before 62. That is the earliest age you can get Social Security retirement checks.

First, your Social Security check may be smaller than you figured. This is because benefits are based on your average lifetime covered earnings. A maximum of only five years of low, or no earnings, can be dropped out when computing benefits.

Second, you may lose insured status for disability benefits if you have a big gap in your earnings record. Most older people need not only a certain total number of Social Security work credits, but some of them must have been earned in recent years. In most cases, this means at least five years coverage during the 10 years before onset of disability.

To demonstrate the effect of these provisions, let us consider "Jane" who began receiving her State pension at 55 and has not worked since. If she decides to apply for her full Social Security retirement benefit at 65, several years of no earnings must be included when figuring her average earnings. Also, she will have lost her disability insured status in the last few years before she is 65.

For more information about Social Security benefits and the effect that early retirement may have on them, contact Social Security by calling 1-800-234-5772. The nearest Social Security office is located in the Federal Building, room 600, 200 Granby Street. The office is open from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Business

People's Bank Names Flounder President, CEO

People's Bank of Virginia Beach has announced the appointment of Thomas E. Flounders III as president and chief executive officer of the bank. Flounders will be responsible for all of the bank's activities.

Prior to joining the bank, Flounders was a senior vice-president of industrial development and government relations for Central Fidelity Bank in Richmond. He had been with Central Fidelity since June 1971, and had served as executive vice-president for retail banking services for the Hampton Roads area until he assumed his last position in Richmond.

Flounders is active in the Virginia Bankers Association as well as the American Bankers Association, serving on various committees within both organizations.

Before moving to Richmond, Flounders was active in the Virginia Beach community, serving as chairman of the Virginia Beach Council of the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce, as chairman of the Neptune Festival, as a board member of the Tidewater Council of Boy Scouts of America and as a committee chairman for the American Cancer Society.

Flounders holds a bachelor of science degree in business administration from Campbell University in North Carolina.

VIRGINIA: IN THE CLERK'S OFFICE OF THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE CITY OF VIRGINIA BEACH, ON THE 19TH DAY OF JANUARY, 1990

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

The object of this suit is for the Petitioners, Paul T. Littlefield and L. Diahann Mears Littlefield, to obtain the adoption of Heaven Leigh Rose Marie Littlefield. Petitioners pray that a Final Order be entered in the above-styled adoption allowing the adoption and change of name; that the natural father of said child is unknown, whose address is also unknown; and that the adoption of Heaven Leigh Rose Marie Littlefield be permitted without the consent of the natural father, whose consent appears to be unobtainable, contrary to the best interest of the child.

An Affidavit has been made and filed that the address of the natural father of Heaven Leigh Rose Marie Littlefield, an infant born to Claire Marie Littlefield on August 5, 1987, in Oahu, Hawaii, is unknown, and it is ORDERED that he appear before this Court on March 2, 1990, in the Virginia Beach Circuit Court, Municipal Center, Virginia Beach, Virginia, and do what is necessary to protect his interests.

It is further ORDERED that this Order of Publication be published in The Virginia Beach Sun, a newspaper having a general circulation in this City, once a week for four (4) consecutive weeks.

Dam Neck Road Phase I Underway

The Dam Neck Road Phase I project, for which ground was recently broken, is for the construction of a six-lane divided highway along a new alignment from General Booth Boulevard to Gallery Drive, and a four-lane divided road from Gallery Drive to Holland Road, including a bikepath.

The project will provide an alternate route for traffic currently using London Bridge Road, Shipp's Corner Road and General Booth Boulevard, and will divert traffic from Harpers Road, Princess Anne Road and Holland Road. By using the new Dam Neck Road, vehicles traveling from the Holland Road intersection to the General Booth Boulevard intersection will reduce travel distance by approximately 2 1/2 miles.

The new road is designed to carry 40,000 vehicles per day by the year 2010, with an estimated traffic volume of 15,000 vehicles per day upon opening.

Dam Neck Road will be the cornerstone of the proposed roadway network in the southern portion of Virginia Beach. Once constructed, it will significantly reduce traffic delays in this area. The new road will also provide access to Corporate Landing, a 372-acre multi-use business park planned near General Booth Boulevard.

Project distance is 4.5 miles. Estimated project cost is $18,624,407, including engineering cost, site acquisition, construction, utility adjustments, landscaping, street lights and signals. Construction is scheduled for January 1990 to July 1992.

By taking the new road, those travelling to General Booth Boulevard will reduce their distance.

The new road will eventually carry 40,000 cars per day.

Miller cited the "right to die" as a second legal issue facing the nation in the '90s. He said the growth of biotechnology has made this another complex problem, starting with the question of an embryo's "right to life."

A Los Angeles Times Poll, published in the Norfolk newspaper on New Year's Day, reported that "Euthanasia is backed overwhelmingly by nearly 9 in 10 Americans, who agree that 'life-sustaining medical treatment should be withheld or withdrawn from terminally ill patients, provided that is what the patients want or what the family wants if the patients are not able to express their wishes.'"

The third issue discussed by Miller was the war on drugs, which has put tremendous pressure on the already overburdened courts. His concern, however, was that the drug war has created Constitutional issues, as many of our rights are perhaps being abrogated in an over-zealous effort to control the drug plague.

The case for legalizing drugs has been headlined in newspapers and magazines for the past several months. The poll cited earlier in this column reports that "Americans oppose legalizing drugs by 2-1. But three in every 10 have joined the controversial chorus of people advocating legalization, agreeing that 'decriminalizing drug use may be the only way to bring the drug crisis under control.'"

The great majority of Americans fear that legalizing drugs will open Pandora's Box. They believe that such a move would say to the children of this generation that it is okay to use substances known to be addictive, even mind-altering. It would condone substances that could harm, even kill, an unborn child.

These are only three of the divisive social issues confronting the nation in the 1990s. We the People must recognize that these problems affect all of us. Any meaningful solution will require that we resolve to become a part of the solution and not a part of the problem.

oil on Alcoholism which stated that alcohol is directly or indirectly responsible for 97,500 deaths a year, consumes $15 billion a year in medical expenses and, in 1983, cost the economy $117 billion in lost productivity. More equally impressive information is contained in a booklet put together by the Virginia Beach Community Alliance for Drug Rehabilitation and Education (CADRE). If the group can raise enough money, the booklet will be mailed to every household in Virginia Beach in hopes of helping parents recognize the signs of substance abuse in children and how to get help.

CADRE's "Tips for Parents about Substance Abuse" points out that alcohol is the main drug of choice for children, that one out of ten 12 and 13 year olds drink alcoholic beverages, that one out of four children will become a problem drinker in high school, and that one in 20 high school seniors uses alcohol or marijuana daily. Their booklet will contain more information about other drugs and tips for parents on helping children, but again, they want to raise our awareness of alcohol as a drug. We certainly hope they will find the necessary funds because it sounds like timely information.

was once a mecca of people is now a deserted sand dumping site. There's as much sand on Atlantic Avenue, it seems, than there is on the beach itself.

The blocked-off roads still don't stop locals from hanging out at the bars on the strip at night, though. Parking places are invented on side roads or those with much determination will walk a few blocks to get to their destination.

Citizens of Virginia Beach should just grin and bear the temporary mess. Come summertime, the beach will be booming again, this time with a newer look and better disposition. At least the city chose to do the construction in the dead of winter, obviously keeping the businesses' best interest at heart. — K.L.D.

Ricketts also said that reports that the income level of tourists in Virginia Beach is slipping also are not supported by the survey which shows that 40 percent of the visitors have incomes of $50,000 or more while the average income is $45,000.

He said also that a major attraction for visitors here is the Marine Science Museum, second only to Busch Gardens, and that 85 percent of the visitors questioned think that Virginia Beach is great.

Spring Council Election Heating Up

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Facing an official filing deadline of March 6, six candidates have already formally declared their candidacies for the 1990 councilmanic election on May 1. City Council term, which begins July 1.

Council incumbents Nancy Parker, John Moss, Al Balko, and Barbara Henley, as well as challengers John Parmele and Oscar Northern, have publicly declared their candidacies.

Councilmen Will Sessions and John Perry, whose terms are up in June, have made no formal announcements, but said they do plan to seek a seat on city council again.

Henley will be in her fourth term if reelected. The 47-year-old Pungo Borough representative said she would like to remain on council because she did not think she could abandon the work "that we are doing to develop a comprehensive growth management plan for the future... when we seem finally to be making real progress." Henley said she has tried to find a way to preserve agriculture in the city's southern part while at the same time allowing rural land owners to realize some of the income they might receive from the redevelopment of their property.

"We're doing a much better job addressing the problems. The important thing is to have the commitment to continue," she said.

Parker and Moss, in a joint press conference, both announced that they wish to keep Virginia Beach moving forward.

Parker said in 1986, when she was first elected to council, the city had made many mistakes that needed to be confronted and corrected, such as overcrowded schools, backlog of road projects, overextended police and fire protection, delayed water and sewer projects and inadequate park/recreational space. She said most of the city's problems were due to a phenomenal residential growth rate.

"So much has been accomplished in this period and the citizens of Virginia Beach are to be commended for their willingness to become active partners with the city council to move Virginia Beach forward as demonstrated by the success of the bond referendums and the mini bond program," said Parker.

Moss agreed by saying "quality of life is job one in Virginia Beach. "Nancy and I are running for re-election to continue this partnership as Virginia Beach prepares itself for the 21st century. Our voting record addresses our commitment to fiscal responsibility, economic develop-

Sessions

Minority Report Presented To Labor Day Review Commission

Commission Had Already Approved Its 21-Page Report

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Minutes after the chairman of the Labor Day Review Commission spoke of the unanimous approval of the Commission's 21-page report Monday, a Commission member submitted a minority report.

Mrs. Janet Ballard, representing the National Panhellenic Council, took issue with the report's failure to include any comment on "what appears to me on the video tapes willful and unwarranted beatings by some police of individuals who were in no way engaged in the struggle at the time the pictures were made."

Dr. Edward E. Brickell, Commission chairman, told council that every word was agreed to by every member of the Commission on Jan. 25, but that on Saturday, Jan. 27, one member called about a word change.

The section referred to by Ballard concerned police action. The report concluded the majority of police officers "behaved with self-control, restraint and professionalism. We are concerned however, about the relatively passive posture of police officials toward officers who obviously took inappropriate action toward residents and visitors."

"The report refers to this matter as 'inappropriate force,'" Ballard said. "While the tapes do not show this behavior to have been widespread, in my judgment, because it pictures several policemen beating one individual, it cannot be treated lightly and should be addressed specifically."

Councilman John L. Perry asked whether council would be accepting the report with Ballard's addendum.

Mayor Meyera Oberndorf in turn asked Brickell whether the addendum would be included in the report.

Brickell replied that he would have to talk to the Commission and the matter will be taken care of "one way or another."

Ballard said that she had seen sub-committee reports but had not seen the wording to which she took exception until the total draft report. By the time she reached the Beach Pavilion at 7:40 p.m. on Jan. 24, she learned that the report had been approved and the meeting and the commission adjourned.

She said that she had been informed by Brickell that there was no way possible that anything as substantive and as agreed upon by all of the other members could be changed.

Brickell, while presenting the report to council, said that the Commission members were a diligent and dedicated group and at no time did any member refuse to speak on an issue.

Oberndorf promptly set up a workshop on the report for Feb. 5 prior to the council meeting and asked the Commission to continue to work together "so that most good things occur."

Dr. Harrison Williams, vice chairman of the Commission, said that he seconded everything Brickell said, and added that each member took the assignment seriously.

Oberndorf commended the group for turning in the report a month earlier than anticipated which will give the Beach a longer time to prepare for Labor Day Weekend 1990.

The report generally found that a lack of leadership contributed to the unfortunate Labor Day weekend when a reported 100,000 college students and others gathered at the Beach for "Greekfest." The weekend was marred by two nights of rioting and looting.

Other findings of the Committee: City leaders underestimated the magnitude of Labor Day 1989 and the potential impact of racial tensions nationally until it was too late.

✓ The focus of planning and preparation was primarily on law enforcement.

✓ There are failures of communication.

✓ Some Labor Day weekend visitors and local citizens engaged in acts of provocation and violence that threatened civil authority, violated property rights and created fear for personal safety.

✓ Law-abiding visitors and citizens who were present failed to exert influence that may have assisted in controlling the lawless behavior of others.

City Votes To Spend 100 Percent In Funds To Defer Health Department Layoffs

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

City council voted unanimously Monday to spend 100 percent in local funds to defer any layoffs in the Virginia Beach Health Department until June 30.

If the program has to be continued beyond this fiscal year, Councilman John D. Moss suggested that the city look for subsidies furnished by the city for other state offices and to transfer them to departments, like the Health Department, which concentrates on more humane needs.

On Jan. 8 council approved an expenditure of $58,733 in 100 percent local funds to delay reductions in the staff until Feb. 15 and Monday allocated $104,202 from other accounts within the city to defer the lay-offs until the end of the fiscal year.

Because of a State funding shortfall and lagging revenue collections in the local Health Department, the department faced a reduction of 26 state positions, 24 of which are currently filled.

The council took further action Monday after concern was expressed by the staff, the public and council. The staff reductions would have meant a 70 percent reduction in the dental services and a 10 percent reduction in other services.

Concern chiefly centered about the effect of the cut on the pre-natal care program which already is not funded to meet the needs.

Councilman Harold Heischober had previously suggested deferring the lay-off of 17 filled positions until March 31 to avoid precipitous reductions in service and to allow time for addressing the health funding by the General Assembly. He said Monday, however, that he spent two days in Richmond and felt that "help would not be forthcoming."

Council's action defers the lay-offs of 22 filled positions until June 30 and covers unemployment costs for those employees upon their lay-off.

Heischober also said that "Council has been chastised by the misinformed public by irresponsible reporting." He said that council never removed funds from the Health Department. "I do not feel we have been treated equitably," he said, referring to letters to the editor chastising council.

"Council never intended to take away from the needy," he said.

The Rev. William Dale, pastor of the Ascension Catholic Church, said that there was no question that the failure of the state to fund the Department challenged the city. He said that the local legislators should be pressed to make sure that Virginia Beach is treated "no better and no worse than others." The city receives a low per capita rate of assistance from the State.

Dale said that adequacy in prenatal care is an investment in our future and asked that funds be made available so that the pre-natal care program not be jeopardized.

Dr. E.H. Karokina, representing the Eastern Virginia Medical School, the March of Dimes and citizens, director of pre-natal medicine, spoke on the need for prenatal care. He said that advances in medicine have reduced the infant mortality rate during the past five to ten years, but efforts should be expended in preventive and educational measures.

He said he was in favor of providing the funds. "If we can provide care, the money will be well-spent. We can prevent premature births in our city."

Moss said he favored the allocation "since we can meet the needs without moving the budget around." He said he still hoped that local legislators will be more aggressive.

His motion to approve the expenditure was seconded by Councilwoman Barbara Henley who asked about Medicaid assistance.

Dr. George Sjolund, Health Department director, said that no Medicaid assistance is provided to the Health Department, but that the Department defers patients to Medicaid where appropriate. He said that not all physicians will see Medicaid patients. He said that the reimbursements are considered too small, and that the patients are often high-risk patients.

He said that the department has more people seeking help than it has the capacity to serve.

The allocation by the city will allow the department to continue what it is presently doing.

Traditionally the State provides 55 percent of the Health Department Budget and the localities provide the other 45 percent. In some areas, Virginia Beach is contributing considerably more. For several years the city has been paying for obstetrical services for indigents.

Scholarship Search

Tabernacle Baptist Athletes In Search Of Scholarships; Basketball, Volleyball Standouts Hope To Coach Own Teams Someday

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

Teri Felton and Tammy Mansfield are two determined young ladies.

The two Chesapeake athletes are trying to fulfill their dreams of going to college, preferably on a scholarship, and someday coach their own sports teams.

Felton of Great Bridge, and Mansfield of Indian River, are both seniors at Tabernacle Baptist School in Virginia Beach. Both girls play basketball, volleyball, and run track and Mansfield is also on the softball team. But each girl has her own special sport in which she'd like to excel.

"If I had to pick a sport, softball would be my best sport, but I love basketball better," said Mansfield, who is looking into attending Emory and Henry College or Virginia Wesleyan.

Felton said she'd rather stay closer to home, possibly attending Virginia Commonwealth, to play her favorite sport, volleyball.

"I enjoy it more and I'm better at it," said the hitter/setter, whose team has been regional champs for four years, state champions for two and second in the state one year.

Felton has been scouted by several schools and has practiced with other schools' teams. She has also sent off copies of her volleyball statistics to schools of interest to her.

"What I've been looking at right now has been looking pretty good," she said.

Mansfield said basketball has been her love ever since she was old enough to hold a ball.

"In basketball you have to play as a team. It's a mind game. To me, it's more of a challenge," said the point guard, team captain, Most Valuable Player recipient and 1989 Homecoming Queen.

Mansfield is hoping she will receive a scholarship for athletic prowess.

Felton said she would be happy with a partial or full scholarship or even a grant. The 17-year-old daughter of Buddy and Lenore Felton, of Etheridge Road, only began thinking about going to college a few years ago. So did Mansfield, but she had a little persuading.

Felton and Mansfield both experienced a great loss about a year ago. Their basketball and volleyball coach Sony Adams passed away unexpectedly last March. Both girls credit Adams for the success of both teams.

Council Election

Eight People Announce Their Candidacy

It's election time again and the field is already getting crowded in a run for six city council seats.

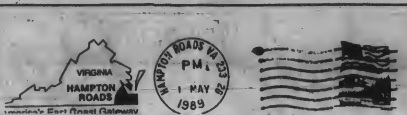

So far, eight people have definitely said they are going to run; six of them are currently council members.

It's only January and the candidates have four more months to convince the Virginia Beach community who is the best person to make decisions on the city's behalf. It seems that the incumbents will have it a lot easier than the newcomers. The citizens of Virginia Beach already know them and know what they are capable of accomplishing. Those who have never run for office, or held a City Council position, may find it a little tougher convincing the voting public.

Many of the candidates have the same views and concerns. Just about all of them want to get involved in issues such as education, transportation, economic development and social problems. But each of them has his or her own way of dealing with each issue. The public's job is to decide which candidate will deal with each issue in the best way.

Several candidates are intent on changing the city. Virginia Beach is Virginia Beach, it can't be changed. But it can be improved. Hopefully with the right people in office, the right decisions and changes will be made so the city can continue to move forward and grow.

For the next couple of months Virginia Beach residents should keep their eyes and ears open and listen to what these candidates have to say. Most of it can be very crucial to the city's future. If we want what's right for the city, we need to elect the right people on May 1. — K.L.D.

New Postmark In Operation

Virginia Beach residents may have noticed a new postmark on mail leaving Hampton Roads.

The postmark, which went into effect last Thursday, is a contemporary outline of Virginia with the Hampton Roads postal area shaded in fine lines. Displayed beneath the symbol are the words "America's East Coast Gateway." The symbol will be used to cancel each piece of mail.

The tiny mark, recently approved by the U.S. Postal Service, is the result of a concerted effort by the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce.

With 225 million pieces of stamped mail leaving Hampton Roads each year, the postmark is expected to provide an excellent vehicle to carry the name of Hampton Roads throughout the world, according to John F. Keeling, chairman of the chamber's board.

The chamber will also initiate a program to have a business incorporate the mark on their metered mail. Metered mail accounts for an additional 200 million pieces of outgoing mail per year.

The idea for the graphic was suggested in October 1988 by interested local parties. After local postal management expressed a willingness to cooperate, the Chamber's marketing and public affairs committee took on the project.

The design concept and copy for the mark was developed by a Norfolk-based marketing, advertising and public relations firm, which prepared and donated the finished art for the graphic.

The U.S. Postal Service gave its stamp of approval in October. The finished dies bearing the new postmark were delivered just recently.

According to the Chamber, as part of its work on the postmark, the Chamber undertook a study of the origin of the name Hampton Roads. The research showed that Henry Wriothesley, the third Earl of Southampton, lent his name to the region nearly 400 years ago. Wriothesley was a 16th century English nobleman, patron of William Shakespeare and defender of freedom.

In the early 1600s, Lord Delaware, then governor of Virginia, named the region for Southampton in honor of his gifts of money and personal prestige in support of the colonization of Virginia.

Letters To The Editor

Save Bailey Creek Wetlands

Editor:

When a group from "Save Bailey Creek Wetland" made a presentation to our Dock Landing Road Civic League, and spoke of their frustrations with Army Corps of Engineers and other agencies, I instantly identified with this.

As to our own experiences from 1968 through the present time, we made complaints, wrote letters, went to talk to people at the Corps, voiced our concerns, adverse effects, unpermitted dredging filling wetlands. All of our concerns were disregarded. We even showed photographs. They were never notified as adjacent property owners I have noticed and have been told by others that Corps was totally law enforcement in all aspects. They do not regard the general public on our concerns or adverse effects on environment.

I and the "Save Bailey Creek Wetlands," ask anyone concerned to write to General Kelly, HQ U.S. Army Corps Eng. Washington, D.C. 20314-1000.

Becoming Aware Of Child Porno

Editor:

About 260 child pornographic magazines are marketed in this country. Police vice squads report that over 75 percent of child molesters admitted patterning their actions after pornography. They also report about 4,000 children murdered annually in snuff films in which kids are photographed while being tortured and killed.

Additionally, a psychologist at a major midwest university claims there is a unique syndrome associated with pornography. It includes addiction, escalation, desensitization and acting out. What was once shocking, wrong, or immoral is then legitimized.

There is a local speaker's bureau which will come and help inform groups of the detrimental effects of pornography, and will also provide direction for personal help.

Adopt-A-Highway

Virginia Beach Highways Becoming Litterfree

If you've noticed that Virginia Beach's highways are looking more litterfree, it's probably because of the city's successful Adopt-A-Highway Pilot Program.

Program volunteers have taken their own time to go out and pick up trash and debris from our roadways. There are probably very few people who would be willing to take on such a task.

Even though there is a fine, and usually, a severe one, for littering, people still continue to do it. It's such a shame to see cans, bags and bottles along the side of any road. It certainly damages a city's looks, especially one as beautiful as Virginia Beach. But, people who litter have their reasons. Most likely they feel they can litter because there is already litter on the ground, or because they know someone else will do the cleaning up. That's no excuse.

The Adopt-A-Highway was a great idea; now Virginia Beach residents will be reminded that roadsides are public land owned by all of us and if we litter it we have to clean it up.

Those volunteers who have participated in the Adopt-A-Highway program so far should be commended. It's nice to know that there are people out there who care enough about their city and its image, to do something about it.

Anyone interested in participating in the Adopt-A-Highway program should call the city's Landscape Services Division at 427-4104. — K.L.D.

Volunteers Needed

American Cancer Society Needs Volunteer Drivers

If you are a caring and compassionate person with some extra time on your hands, the American Cancer Society needs your help. They are looking for volunteers to drive patients to their cancer treatments.

Each volunteer will probably be needed one or two hours a day, depending on how many patients there are. Many of these patients are elderly, or have no family to help them out. Cancer is a very serious disease, so most likely the patients are unable to transport themselves.

Cancer patients trying to fight the disease need their treatments; they depend on them to hopefully help cure them. Wouldn't it be nice to know you helped someone less fortunate, even if you don't know them?

If you are a housewife, or you work part-time, think about giving a little of your time to the Cancer Society. You won't get paid, but your reward will be knowing you helped a cancer patient. — K.L.D.

VWC Breaks Ground For New Dining Center

Virginia Wesleyan College this week broke ground for the third of three major buildings in four years, the most prolific building period in the college's history.

The $3.5 million Campus Dining Center follows a $1 million academic building — the Center for the Humanities — completed in 1988, and the $3.8 million completion of Academic Village II, now under construction, to be opened this summer.

The ceremony honors a charter member of the Board of Trustees, Robert Friend Boyd, and his wife, Sara Miller Boyd, who provided the initial leadership gift of $500,000 for the dining center.

The 24,500-square-foot dining center, with 17,000 square feet of new construction and renovation of 7,500 square feet of existing space, will include a dining hall with seating for 500; two smaller dining rooms; a gallery/lounge; kitchen preparation and serving areas; a bookstore; campus post office and an enlarged business office. The facilities are scheduled for completion by mid-1991.

The 43,290-square-foot addition to Village II includes two dormitories, two academic halls with classrooms and faculty offices and a student commons. The student commons includes adjacent offices for student activities, including career planning and placement, health services, residence life, and the chapel. The buildings will be finished for the fall semester of 1990.

The first of the three 25th anniversary expansion projects, the Center for the Humanities, includes 18 faculty offices, six classrooms, offices for the Adult Studies Program, a language resources center, a secretary's office, and an atrium/lounge.

Robert Boyd, vice-chairman of the Virginia Wesleyan College Board of Trustees, and his wife Sara were expected to speak at the ceremony. The Boyds have a long association with the college. Boyd, a Norfolk attorney, is one of the original trustees and has served on the Board since 1961. The Boyds have an alumni son, James Matheson Boyd, a 1984 graduate of Virginia Wesleyan, who is a member of his father's law firm, Boyd and Boyd.

Shriver and Holland associates of Norfolk are the architects for the Campus Dining Center. The contractor is W.B. Meredith II Inc.

Virginia Beach Celebrates Community College Week

Virginia Beach recently celebrated its seventh Community College Week with the theme "Community Colleges: We Help You Make It in Virginia."

During 1988-89, 204,493 individuals were served by the 23 community colleges in Virginia. Enrollment is at an all-time high, with full-time equivalent student annual enrollments expected to reach 69,511 in 1989-90, a 12 percent increase over 1988-89.

The system's primary mission is to provide academic programs equivalent to the first two years of the baccalaureate degree, occupational-technical program, training for business and industry, community service program, and continuing and developmental education.

Together, the community colleges offer more than 220 different programs and students may receive an Associate in Applied Science degree, an Associate in Arts and Science degree, an Associate in Arts degree, a certificate, or a diploma.

Over the last year more than 700 Virginia businesses, industries and governmental agencies have had contractual arrangements for training with Virginia's community colleges. In addition, the colleges have conducted almost 700 other special courses for Virginia employers, serving over 21,000 employees.

In 1987, the VCCS and the Center for Innovative Technology began a three-year pilot program — the Economic Technology Development Program. Ten community colleges have technology transfer directors with an additional eight slated to begin in the next two years.

The program is designed to help small and medium-sized manufacturers, distributors and service firms find solutions to technology-related business programs through technology, education and training, and business development resources. The pilot program is already benefiting clients. Over 600 contacts have been made with potential clients, more than 200 projects initiated and over 100 completed.

Virginia's community colleges are training Virginians to fill Virginia's jobs. They are training students to enter the work force, re-training and upgrading skills of employees in corporations, plants, and even small businesses to keep the economy of Virginia on solid ground.

This past summer the Virginia Community College System and Jefferson National Bank in Charlottesville invited students, faculty and staff to participate in a "Community Colleges are Creative Places" photography contest. The winning photograph will be displayed at the General Assembly during the 1990 session. From March 1990 to December 1990, the photographs will be divided into two touring exhibits that will be installed in the lobbies of Jefferson National Banks throughout the Commonwealth.

City's Waterbodies Appreciated And Used

The Mayor's Report

Virginia Beach Mayor
The Honorable
Meyera Oberndorf

One of the natural features that makes our city an enjoyable place to live is our proximity to waterways. We have an abundance of waterbodies from the Atlantic Ocean and Chesapeake Bay to the many bays, creeks and rivers throughout Virginia Beach. Many of us live on waterways. We all live close to waterways. This time of year we may only cross over or pass them in our trips around town. In the warm months we use those waters for recreational purposes such as swimming, boating or windsurfing. Always they are there for our appreciation and use.

Whether we think of it every day or not, water is important to our lives. We drink it and clean and cook with it daily. We use it to carry some of our wastes. We have a close relationship with water - we are dependent on it. Likewise, it is dependent on us. Water has some natural ability to dilute and purify wastes, but each waterway has a capacity limiting how much waste (pollution) it can accept without being harmed.

For this reason, I am providing some tips on things we can do in the course of our everyday routines to protect our waterways:

1. Take pride in our waterways. The economic and environmental well-being of our city is dependent on maintaining clean, high quality waters.
2. Around the home, discard household substances - paints, cleaners and pesticides - properly, or use substitutes.

3. Read detergent labels. Select one with no phosphates (or trace amounts). Phosphate is a nutrient which can upset the normal balance of a lake or stream and accelerate its aging process.

4. Report pollution incidents to the proper authorities.

5. Use pesticides carefully. For information on the correct use, storage and disposal of pesticides, call the city's Office of Environmental Management (427-4801), Agriculture Department (427-4611) or the toll-free pesticide hotline - 1-800-858-PEST.

6. Reduce litter and control wastes.

Educational Dreams That Really Can Come True

The VBEA Report

By Clair Polley,
President of the Virginia
Beach Education Association

This week's Sun article was written by Keith Geiger, National Education Association president.

Imagine a school where no students come to class hungry. Imagine a school where no students ever nod off in class after spending a sleepless night in a shelter for homeless families, the back seat of a car, or a park bench.

Imagine a school where every faculty member has easy access to the tools and working conditions that people in other professions take for granted: A telephone, clerical support, adequate work space, a personal computer.

Imagine a school where all high school graduates are assured the opportunity to pursue a college education or postsecondary training, no matter how financially hard-pressed their families might be.

Imagine a national full of schools where the materials and equipment essential for learning in today's world are available to all students. These visions of the future are not just idle daydreams. Today, for the first time ever, the nation's top political executives - the governors and the President of the United States - are engaged in a process that could help us all realize some of our fondest dreams for education. These political leaders are jointly developing what they call "national goals for education."

The drive for national education goals started at last September's education summit in Charlottesville, Va. Since that summit, the President and all 50 governors have been collecting ideas and recommendations on just what those goals should be.

NEA is very much a part of this process. I've testified before the National Governors' Association task force that's exploring the various goal alternatives. And I serve on the President's Education Policy Advisory Committee. I've delivered the same message - the NEA's message - to both the governors and the White House. Our nation needs national goals for education that are both ambitious and specific: Ambitious enough to demonstrate that America's leaders understand the depth of the problems facing schools; specific enough so that all of us, including the federal government, can be held accountable.

What sort of goals would fit that bill? I've presented the governors and the

Supreme Court Got Off To A Slow Start In 1790

By Lillian Youell,
Virginia Beach Constitution
Celebration Commission
Consultant

Tomorrow will mark the 200th anniversary of what was scheduled to be the first official meeting of the Supreme Court of the United States. However, when the court convened in the Royal Exchange Building, located in the Wall Street section of New York City, only three of the six justices were present.

John Jay of New York, the Chief Justice, James Wilson of Pennsylvania, and William Cushing of Massachusetts were attired in their robes. Cushing even donned a wig for the historic occasion. The justices took their seats, but, lacking a quorum, took no action.

A court historian later quipped, "The first president immediately on taking office settled down to the pressing business of being president. The first Congress enacted the first laws. The first Supreme Court adjourned!"

The next day, Feb. 2, 1790, James Blair of Virginia arrived and a quorum was achieved. The court could not officially transact business. But there was no business. There were no cases to be heard.

In fact, during the ten-day session, the court merely took care of administrative matters by selecting a clerk, choosing a seal, and admitting several lawyers to practice before it in the future.

The Constitution in Article III stated, "The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one supreme Court, and in such inferior Courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish." It was up to the first Congress to organize the third branch of the government. It did so with the Judiciary Act, signed by President Washington Sept. 24, 1789, which established the state-federal, dual-court structure that has the unique feature of our American judicial system.

On the same day he signed this Act, Washington submitted the names of his nominees for the Supreme Court - the only president ever having had the opportunity to select the entire federal judiciary. His original selections were Chief Justice John Jay, John Rutledge of South Carolina, Robert Hanson Harrison of Maryland, John Blair, James Wilson and William Cushing. Confirmation by the Senate came within two days, on Sept. 26.

Lee Cahill's Virginia Beach City Council Report

Commission

by the Commission include:

- ✓ The establishment of a separate coordinating committee such as the Interlocal Business and Civic Coalition.
- ✓ Consideration by the committee of the timing, character and location of the event after 1990.
- ✓ The review of relevant city ordinances to ensure that they are reasonable, fair, enforceable and adequate. Enforcement of these ordinances should be uniform throughout the year and information about the ordinances should be made available to prospective Labor Day participants before the event.
- ✓ The information by council of a policy and philosophy concerning the Labor Day event and its communication to the city manager.
- ✓ A meeting of the coordinating committee and municipal officials from the surrounding Hampton Roads cities and counties to encourage support.
- ✓ Sufficient manpower and equipment to protect not only health and safety, but property.

- ✓ The utilization of a significant number of black officers during the Labor Day weekend.
- ✓ The use of trained community volunteers to work with the police in disseminating information, acclimating visitors, resolving problems and maintaining proper decorum.
- ✓ Investigating the acquisition of state-of-the-art equipment that would permit identification of persons at long range.
- ✓ Restriction of vehicular traffic on Atlantic and Pacific Avenues between 6th and 39th Streets after dark. Also one-way traffic on Atlantic and Pacific Avenues.
- ✓ Well-lighted, monitored and protected satellite parking areas with transportation provided for a small fee to and from the resort area.
- ✓ The use of curfews and the enforcement of unlawful assembly laws only in the most serious circumstances.

- ✓ Invitations to the governor and other appropriate dignitaries and celebrities.
- ✓ Prompt identification of promoters, sponsors and locations for events. The sites should be capable of holding reasonably large groups - beachfront street ends, parks and athletic facilities - and be geographically dispersed. More than one performance should be given at each location.
- ✓ Dropping "Greekfest" as the name for the event.
- ✓ Improvement of police operations - police should be present throughout the beachfront areas at all times.
- ✓ The investment by beachfront retail establishments of roll-down shutters and passive security systems, used on a year-round basis for protection from natural disasters as well as burglary, looting and other criminal activity.
- ✓ Continuation of police training in cultural sensitivity, stress management, and crisis management.

- ✓ Review by the police of available films of the 1989 Labor Day weekend and consideration of appropriate disciplinary action against those officers who violated proper procedures.
- ✓ The reservation at particular motels of blocks of rooms for specific fraternity, sorority and college groups.
- ✓ The integration of the National Guard, if used, into the overall law enforcement plan and its use.
- ✓ The report finds that the city's problem was magnified in the eyes of the public and intensified over the weekend because of the character of the media's treatment of the event. "Many students and others came to the Beachfront with a belligerent attitude because of their perception of the negativism of city officials."
- ✓ Even if, as the majority of council who addressed Commission said, the primary function of council is to set policy, "we believe," the report says, "that city council and the mayor should have been more active and should have exerted greater leadership in connection with Labor Day 1989. The council also failed to establish policy with respect to Labor Day 1989."

Other findings:

- ✓ The city manager and Police Chief Charles R. Wall also failed to exercise adequately leadership in all necessary planning areas before that weekend but "performed reasonably well during the events of the Labor Day weekend 1989."
- ✓ Black leadership in the region should have been more involved.
- ✓ Part of the blame may be laid on misunderstandings and poor communications among well-meaning responsible people from various groups.
- ✓ City management made little or no effort in the months after Labor Day 1988 to communicate about Labor Day 1989 with colleges, universities, student governments, etc.

- ✓ City management and state leaders of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People did not adequately follow up on initial contacts.
- ✓ Information about new ordinances and enforcement policies was not communicated effectively.
- ✓ The preliminary report of the Beachfront Events Committee which included suggestions for Labor Day was sent to the city manager's office in mid June but was not reviewed until August.
- ✓ Reasons for the city's refusal to utilize a welcome tent, apparently based on the city's concern with potential legal liability, was not communicated effectively.
- ✓ With the exception of a few council members who explicitly requested briefings over the weekend, council was not kept informed of the details of Labor Day.
- ✓ The report also states that

Historical Society Re-Enactment Set

The Princess Anne County/Virginia Beach Historical Society will co-sponsor a living history program with the Eloise Hunter Chapter of the Victorian Society in America and the Sixth Virginia Infantry Civil War Re-Enactment Group on Saturday, Feb. 10 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the historic Upper Wolfsware Plantation on Potters Road.

Continuous tours will be approximately 30 minutes long, with the last tour beginning at 9 p.m.

Reservations are required. Admission is $10.

The evening will begin with a moonlit ride in a horse-drawn carriage down the drive and through time to Upper Wolfsware as it was during Victorian times. Guests will arrive to find civil war soldiers encamped on the lawn as protection for General Robert E. Lee who will be staying at the house that evening. Once inside, guests will be guided through rooms where costumed actors will be reenacting the lifestyle and the evening pursuits of the era. After the tour guests will arrive at a reception where they may meet General Robert E. Lee and have an old fashioned photo taken. Coffee and desserts will be provided. Guests will then finish the evening with a carriage ride back to the 20th century.

Admission to this event will be limited to 100 people. It is also recommended that ladies not wear heels any higher than 2 inches for their personal safety and comfort. In the event of rain or snow the program will be held Feb. 17.

For more information and reservations, call Ruth Akright at 491-0127.

Mid-Atlantic Boat Show Set

The 37th Annual Mid-Atlantic Sports and Boat Show will open Feb. 10 at the Virginia Beach Pavilion. The event will continue for nine days through Feb. 18.

The $5 million exhibition will feature power and sail boats, as well as marine related products and services.

The show's fleet will include boats up to 40 feet in length, including runabouts, fishing boats, luxurious family cruisers and a wide variety of sail boats. All major manufacturers of outboard engines will be represented as well as in-board engine manufacturers. The latest in electronic equipment will be on display with factory representatives in attendance.

Also featured will be public service exhibits including the U.S. Coast Guard, National Weather Service, Virginia Game Commission and the F.C.C. Numerous Hampton Roads fishing clubs will display mounted trophies and various types of tackle. A nautical flea market will provide a wide variety of gear and accessory bargains.

Show hours are Saturday, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., Sundays, noon to 7 p.m., weekdays, 6 to 9:30 p.m. Admission is family priced at $5 for adults and $1 for children 12 years and under. Plenty of free parking is available.

Kennedy To Appear In "Teen"

Virginia Beach's Heather Kennedy, 16, will appear in TEEN Magazine's February issue as a Great Model Search regional semifinalist.

Of the approximately 24,000 entries received annually, only 480 are chosen as regional semifinalists. That's 16 per region for five months. The field is then narrowed to 96 super semifinalists. And finally to 12 finalists. The finalists receive an all-expense paid trip to the National Finals.

The 1990 Great Model Search winner will receive a $5,000 cash award from Maybelline (R) and will appear in a national Maybelline ad. Also a trip to two to a resort area from Tropical Blend (R) and a wardrobe of elegant formals from Mike Benet Formals. Plus modeling opportunities with the program's sponsors.

The winner will appear on the cover of the October issue of TEEN. If Heather wins, she will be in a long line of successful models who have launched their careers on

Kennedy

TEEN's cover. Past TEEN discoveries include Cheryl Tiegs, Cristina Ferrare and Kelly Hamon.

Sponsors of the Great Model Search program are Maybelline (R), Tropical Blend (R), Clearasil (R), Mike Benet Formals and Impulse Night Rhythms/Verve/Babe.

Personality Profile

City Attorney Les Lilley's Hometown Pride Shows In His Dedication To The City

By Karen Dalrymple
Staff Writer

"I've always felt very close to the city and comfortable working with the city," said Virginia Beach City Attorney Les Lilley.

Lilley, 43, of Bay Point Greens resident, has proved his dedication to his hometown after working for almost 20 years in various city departments. But it was not until last fall that Lilley became city council's top attorney.

Although he was born in Norfolk in 1949, Lilley feels strong ties to Virginia Beach because his family moved to the city's Kempsville Heights section in 1951. He graduated from Princess Anne High School in 1967.

After graduating from the University of Richmond with a degree in business administration with a concentration on finance, Lilley took his first job with the city in 1971. He worked for the Virginia Beach Municipal Fellowship, an intern program, in the Finance Department. Under the direction of Giles Dodd, Lilley conducted a study of the city's business license code.

"I believed I had an aptitude to the business curriculum and I've pretty much followed that aptitude. That was my first contact with the city," Lilley said.

Lilley returned to school, this time at the College of William and Mary, to earn his MBA degree in 1971. Upon finishing school he went right back to work for Dodd as

In 1974, Lilley went to work for the city manager's office as an intergovernmental relations coordinator. He acted as a liaison person with the city's general assembly delegation, performed various duties for then city manager Roger Scott and coordinated grants programs for the city.

Later on that year, George Hanbury became city manager and Lilley's position was upgraded to assistant to the city manager. Hanbury is now Portsmouth's city manager.

"I left the city in 1976 to return to school," Lilley said.

He attended the University of Richmond's T.C. Williams School of Law, where he received his law degree in August of 1978. He was admitted to the bar in September of that same year and worked for a private law firm for a short amount of time.

"It was a combination of my background with the city and my business background. I wanted to combine some of the skills I was using," Lilley said of his decision to practice law.

After his short stint at the law firm, Lilley once again returned to the city of Virginia Beach. For the next 4½ years he worked in the commonwealth attorney's office under former commonwealth's attorney Andre Evans.

"I was assistant commonwealth attorney, prosecuting felony cases before all the local courts," he said. He was eventually placed in charge of the juvenile court unit and white collar crime prosecutors.

In 1983 Lilley made yet another change and returned to practicing law with a private Norfolk firm, Taylor, Walker and Adams until 1987, when he returned to the city attorney's office and became assistant city attorney for Dale Bimson.

"You try to find your niche. Mine is particularly suited to working for the city. I recognized that and made that switch in 1987," he said.

In October of 1989, Lilley was appointed Virginia Beach's city attorney.

"I'm the legal council to city council, the city manager and city departments, as well as boards and commissions of the city," said Lilley, who has 12 assistant city attorneys also providing services to the city and community.

Lilley's strong Virginia Beach ties not only helped him get to where he is today, but they also helped him meet his wife of 11 years, Linda. They met back in 1972 when she was working at the city's Kempsville branch library.

Linda is now an assistant professor at Old Dominion University.

"It's sort of a city link for me," Lilley said, referring to how he met his wife. He and Linda have an almost six-year-old daughter, Karen.

In his spare time, of which Lilley said he has little, he enjoys the beach and fishing, as well as attending All Saints Episcopal Church. He is also a member of the Virginia Beach Bar Association and the Virginia State Bar.

"I really have a desire to do well. It's my internal mechanism, I guess," Lilley said. "I'm really excited about being city attorney of Virginia Beach. There are enough challenges here to last a really long time. We have some goals and objectives here in the office. There's much work to do."

Get Healthy With Some Wheat Germ

Before oat bran started getting all the press, wheat germ was the darling of the grain family. Why? Because it packs a delicious nutty crunch while it provides important nutrients, like protein, B vitamins, vitamin E, potassium and zinc.

The germ is the heart of the wheat kernel, and the part that would GERminate and sprout, if planted.

Wheat germ comes in two forms: raw or toasted. The raw version is higher in nutrients but can taste bitter. Toasted wheat germ may be slightly less nutritious, but it has a great nutty flavor and a longer shelf life than the raw form.

Because it is a natural source of oil, which deteriorates rapidly at room temperature, wheat germ should always be stored in the refrigerator or freezer, in an airtight container.

Add wheat germ to all kinds of baked goods: muffins, breads, cookies, crumb crusts. Substitute wheat germ for part of the flour when baking. For every cup of flour called for, use ¾ cup flour and ¼ cup wheat germ.

Other things you can do with wheat germ:

- Add to ground meats (about ¼ cup per pound) before cooking as a meat extender.

- Sprinkle over cooked or dry cereals before serving for added nutrition.

- Sprinkle over cottage cheese or yogurt for a healthy snack.

- Combine equal parts wheat germ and melted butter or margarine to make a "crumble" mixture. Sprinkle over scalloped vegetables, fish, poultry or casseroles before baking.

- Add to cobblers toppings over baked fruits or to ingredients in stuffed apples.

- Add to seasoned flour coating mixture for chicken or fish.

VIRGINIA: IN THE CLERK'S OFFICE OF THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE CITY OF VIRGINIA BEACH, ON THE 19TH DAY OF JANUARY, 1990

CA89-103

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

The object of this suit is for the Petitioners, Paul T. Littlefield and L. Diahann Mears Littlefield, to obtain the adoption of Heaven Leigh Rose Marie Littlefield. Petitioners pray that a Final Order be entered in the above-styled adoption allowing the adoption and change of name, that the natural father of the said child is unknown, whose address is also unknown; and that the adoption of Heaven Leigh Rose Marie Littlefield be permitted without the consent of the natural father, whose consent appears to be unobtainable, contrary to the best interest of the child.

An Affidavit has been made and filed that the address of the natural father of Heaven Leigh Marie Littlefield, an infant born to Claire Marie Littlefield on August 5, 1987, in Oahu, Hawaii, is unknown, and it is ORDERED that he appear before this Court on March 2, 1990, in the Virginia Beach Circuit Court, Municipal Court, Virginia Beach, Virginia, and do what is necessary to protect his interests.

It is further ORDERED that this Order of Publication be published in The Virginia Beach Sun, a newspaper having a general circulation in this City, once a week for four (4) consecutive weeks.

Balko, who represents the Lynnhaven Borough and is former chairman of the city's planning commission, is seeking reelection for a second term.

He said the city has many strengths such as the opening of new schools, a good police department, road improvements and community centers that are under construction. But there are weaknesses as well. He said Virginia Beach has taken heavy publicity over the 1989 Labor Day weekend events, and the city is trying to advertise to overcome the issue.

"It's an unknown, but it's got to be a negative for us," said Balko.

Balko, who is retired from Bell Phone Systems, currently has no one opposing him for his borough.

"I've got the time it takes. My particular borough is a full-time position. I'd like to stay if the voters will have me," he said.

Northern, a Pungo resident, and Parmele of Laurel Cove, have both announced their bid for an at-large council position. Northern has never run for an office before, but Parmele ran unsuccessfully for an at-large seat on city council in May 1988 against Councilman Harold Heischouer.

"I've not been pleased with what I've seen in the past four to six years. Since 1986 I don't think things have gotten any better," Parmele said.

Parmele, who is retired from the Navy, said he is tired of seeing the city turning into an overcrowded, overdeveloped "concrete jungle" for which the basic services and infrastructure cannot keep pace.

Parmele said his main concerns are rising taxes and real estate assessments, destruction of trees and farmland, excessive local government spending, the quality of the educational system and excessive campaign spending at all levels. In 1988, Parmele spent less than $200 on his campaign, only $40 out of his own pocket. He received 2,585 votes, placing third in a field of five. His budget this year is $20.

"The average person should be able to run for politics without feeling that his savings will be drained," he said. "I took a beating, naturally," in 1988.

Parmele said he will run a grass-roots, no-frills, meet-the-people campaign.

"I'd like, for the good of the city, to preserve some of the charm we used to have," said Parmele, who has been a resident of Virginia Beach for 23 years. "I'm just going to go in there and offer a choice to the people, show them in the facts."

Northern, who is president of Architectural Ventures of Virginia, Inc., plans on using his background in planning to win him the election.

"I feel I have something I can contribute to the city as we move into the 21st century," said Northern, 59.

Northern said he has insights into certain issues, such as transportation and economic development, which he said needs to be expanded. He also said one of the city's major problems is a lack of leadership at City Hall.

"I think our strengths outweigh our weaknesses. I feel confident. I have an excellent team and good people behind me," he said.

Northern, who has a master's degree in city planning, has been a Virginia Beach resident since 1965 and a Back Bay resident since 1974. The two remaining council members seeking reelection, Perry and Sessoms, don't plan on announcing their candidacies until mid-February.

"I'm 99 percent sure that I'll be running. I'm seeing if I have the same support. So far I'm batting 100 percent," said Sessoms, who, on his first bid, was just elected to council 18 months ago. He said his tenure on council has been a "tremendous learning process."

"I feel I can put it to good use and really move the city forward," said Sessoms, who holds an at-large seat.

Sessoms said the city has several problems, but nothing that can't be overcome. He is concerned about transportation, education, water and social problems, such as indigent care.

Perry, of the Bayside Borough, said he is also concerned about social problems. His goal, he said, is to make sure every Virginia Beach resident has indoor toilets and suitable homes. He said so far the city has made no progress in those areas.

"I'm going to finish the job I started four years ago," said Perry, a retired Virginia Beach teacher.

Perry ran for city council in 1982, but was not elected because he said "the people didn't know me." Then in 1986, while teaching at Kempsville High School, he said it was the votes of his students that got him elected.

Perry said Virginia Beach is a strong city that can handle just about anything that comes its way, but that its one weakness is fear.

"The city government feels they've got to do so much, so they go overboard spending money on things they don't need," said Perry. "They should leave the people alone and don't tax them to death."

Campaign Funds

Each candidate has his or her own idea of how much it will cost to win the election. Parker and Henley said they have no idea what their budget will be.

"We've always run a very people-to-people campaign. The general public felt a partnership," said Parker, whose funds during the last election came from individual donations.

Parmele plans on spending the least amount of money, $20, while Northern said he will probably spend $45,000 to $50,000 on the media, advertising and mailing exposure.

"It's got to be a media blitz kind of thing," he said.

Balko said he spent $54,000 on his last campaign, but this term he plans to spend less than $10,000, depending on how many candidates are running for his borough. He has already begun advertising his campaign for reelection.

Perry said he hopes he won't have to spend a dime. He said he has had offers for donations, but he said he doesn't want them. In 1986 he spent $15,000 to $18,000, but hopes he won't have to come up with that much this year.

"I don't want to put pressure on the voters. They know what I've done. If they like what I've done they'll vote for me," he said.

While Washington was fortunate in the quick response and approval of the Senate, he was not so fortunate with his nominees. Except for Cushing, the tenure of these original members was brief. One declined the nomination in order to accept a state position. Another accepted but never attended a single formal session of the court. Even the Chief Justice would spend much of his tenure abroad on diplomatic missions.

Robert Hanson Harrison declined his nomination in order to become Chancellor of Maryland. To replace him, Washington nominated James Iredell of North Carolina on Feb. 9, 1790. He was confirmed the next day, the same day Court adjourned its first session. Iredell was present for the second term, but it lasted only two days, August 2 and 3, 1790.

The capital and the Supreme Court moved to Philadelphia in 1791. There the court shared a room in the new City hall with the Mayor's Court. Rutledge, who had never attended a single session of the Supreme Court, resigned that year in order to take a state judgeship. Two men who were asked to fill his seat declined. Finally, Thomas Johnson of Maryland accepted the nomination, but only served fourteen months. He was replaced by William Paterson of New Jersey.

No cases were decided by the court in 1791 or 1792. But on Feb. 18, 1793, the court announced its decision in the case of Chisolm v. Georgia. By a vote of five to one, with Iredell the only dissenter, the court upheld the right of citizens of one state, South Carolina, to bring original suits to the Supreme Court against another state, Georgia.

The states were extremely upset by this decision, fearing it would cause economic disaster. Ironically, this first "major ruling" of the Supreme Court was overturned within five years by the adoption of the 11th Amendment. The Supreme Court's beginnings could hardly be called auspicious.

There were other problems. Epidemics of yellow fever caused the court to cancel its August term in 1793 and 1794 (and again in 1797). Then, Chief Justice John Jay resigned in 1795 to become governor of New York. The Senate was in recess when Washington appointed Rutledge to assume the seat of the Chief Justice. He actually presided over the court's August term, but the Senate rejected his nomination.

Early in 1796, Washington named Cushing, the senior justice to serve as Chief Justice. Cushing declined saying he was too old. Yet, he survived and was the only member of the original court to serve into the next century. In fact, he sat on the court for 21 years until his death in 1810.

Washington next offered the post to Senator Oliver Ellsworth of Connecticut, who was confirmed March 8, 1796. Due to ill health, Blair's attendance had been irregular and he finally resigned in 1796. Wilson died two years later. Iredell resigned in 1799, the last justice to step down during the court's first decade.

In evaluating the work of the court during those first 10 years, one must conclude that some progress had been made. On two occasions, the court clearly defined its role. In 1792, the justices stated that Congress had overstepped itself by requiring them to assume nonjudicial responsibilities. Then, in 1793, when Washington asked for advice, the justices politely declined, thereby establishing the policy of issuing no advisory opinions.

Probably the two most significant cases of the almost 50 cases heard during the decade were decided at the February 1796 term. Hylton v. United States brought the first challenge to an act of Congress as unconstitutional. In Ware v. Hylton, the Court established the supremacy of federal treaty provision over conflicting state laws.

Ironically, the lawyer who lost that case was John Marshall of Virginia, who was destined to serve as Chief Justice for three decades, 1801-1835, and who would dominate the court to a degree unmatched by any other justice.

When he died I thought I'd quit. He's the main reason I'm pursuing college and playing ball," said Mansfield, daughter of Joseph and Millie Mansfield.

After college, Felton has dreams of playing on the Beach volleyball circuit and someday coaching her own volleyball team and teaching high school physical education.

Mansfield wants to go into the medical field because "sports aren't going to pay my bills," but she does plan on coaching a high school team some day.

For now both girls are concentrating on graduating from high school and working towards an athletic scholarship.

- ✓ Ensure that all children arrive at school ready to learn.
- ✓ Provide a fully qualified teacher for every classroom.
- ✓ End school funding patterns that tie the quality of education to the wealth of the school district.
- ✓ Make all our schools safe, drug-free, and environmentally healthy.
- ✓ Provide the facilities and materials essential for innovative and creative learning environments.
- ✓ Ensure that all students acquire the necessary skills to participate fully as citizens in our democracy.
- ✓ Reduce the dropout rate to less than 10 percent.

a. Adopt a highway, stream park or beach for litter pickup. Next time you take a walk on a shore, carry a bag for trash pickup.

b. Promote reusable items. Avoid purchasing styrofoam and plastic products and do not discard them into waterways or along roadside ditches that empty to waterways. Items such as pull tabs, plastic bags and bottles, and six-pack rings can be deadly for marine animals such as turtles, ducks and other sea birds.

✓ Eliminate functional adult illiteracy in the United States.

Yes, these goals are ambitious. Why shouldn't they be? If ever there was a time to reassess and reorder our nation's priorities, that time is now. If ever there was the chance of offering educational excellence to every child in America, that chance is not.

Today, for the first time in my more than 25 years in education, we have the attention of the nation's political leaders. Many of them understand the magnitude of the problems confronting our schools. Almost all of them realize how much depends on their solving those problems.

Now is the time to translate that attention and those understandings into real progress for our schools, for our nation — and for America's children.

Recycling helps keep wastes out of waterways and requires less water to be used and fewer pollutants to be generated than in making new products from raw materials.

The city has an office to address citizen concerns and requests for information on these and other environmental issues. For more information, contact the city's Office of Environmental Management at 427-4801.

Commission

failures of the planning and preparations were not exclusively those of the city. Black students and alumni had visited the Beachfront each Labor Day weekend since 1980 but few of their organizations or institutions had shown a willingness to take responsibility for sponsoring events or coordinating activities.

✓ The most important failure of city management was waiting until far too late to encourage or even to assist in activities for visitors it knew would arrive. City officials left the class impression, according to the report, they were doing everything possible to discourage promoters and group events.

✓ Positive steps taken by city officials were visits to Daytona Beach, Fort Lauderdale and Philadelphia, the creation of the Beachfront Events Committee and a courtesy patrol, hiring crowd control and minority consultants by the police department, arrangements for additional public toilet facilities and improved lighting, acquisition of crowd and riot control equipment and the passage of new ordinances aimed at crowd control and unruly behavior.

The report also finds: A disturbingly small force was available along the Beachfront over the Labor Day weekend.

The 1989 ordinances were enforced by the police department in the Beachfront area throughout the entire season.

Most of the visitors were unaware that the police department had a reputation for strictly controlling groups of young people at the Beachfront so police actions were interpreted as racist.

The Commission neither saw nor heard any proof to substantiate allegations of conspiracy theories to incense the crowd.

Some individuals, including local residents came to the Beachfront prepared to take advantage of any disturbance, and others, including some local young people and visiting students came to Virginia Beach expecting unfair or discriminatory treatment and were prepared to respond in a confrontational manner.

No evidence was submitted to support over-charging by motels and hotels.

While the 100,000 count was not verified, the Commission heard speakers who agreed that the crowd was the largest they had ever seen at the Beachfront. Any previous gathering was estimated at 20,000 to 30,000 persons.

The city has few large indoor locations for organized events and only the Pavilion can accommodate close to 10,000 people. Beach area hotels and motels can accommodate roughly 30,000 overnight visitors, assuming four to a room.

Delayed police response to the rioting (to allow police time to get riot gear) resulted in a protection of lives, but not property.

Eyewitnesses accounts indicate a few of the visiting students may have participated in the looting. A greater number of students taunted and threw objects at the police on Sunday and Monday night.

The police generally performed well in the difficult circumstances.

Wedding Poem

Lasting Memories

Father of the Bride

As they stroll proudly down the aisle his mind races to earlier years.

When she used to skin her knees and he wiped away the tears.

Where did those tender days go,
is she ready for a new stage of life?

And what about that cavalier young man,
is he ready for a wife?

not just a Saturday night.

He hopes that all her needs are met and that this bond of love is right.

There's so much that she'll have to learn when the ups and downs get rough.

and he hopes she'll have enough.

They're almost at the end of the aisle,
it went by much too fast.

He needed hours more than this to fondly remember the past.

She's letting go of his arm now and the feeling tugs at his heart.

But he knows that even a husband's love will never replace his part.

and played the role of guide.

She'll be his daughter forever
so today she can be the bride.
